Other Nations Interested in Signing Pact

France, Red China
Expected to be Notable Holdouts

BY LEWIS GULICK
WASHINGTON (AP)—First soundings by U.S. diplomats throughout the non-Communist world have indicated a groundswell in favor of joining the pact to outlaw atmospheric atomic weapons testing.

Officials said reports already in from several dozen capitals show interest in signing the treaty initiated in Moscow Thursday by U.S., British and Soviet negotiators.

They hope the number will soar to more than a hundred. France and Red China are expected to be notable holdouts.

Hope Tempered

The preliminary favorable responses have been tempered in many cases, however, by the need for further consultation and ratification according to domestic government processes.

So far three nations are reported to have announced publicly their intent to sign — Australia, Canada and Ireland.

India has advised President Kennedy that it will sign the treaty as soon as the accord comes into effect, it was learned from diplomatic sources.

Some countries may await U.S. Senate ratification of the treaty before determining their course.

Some of the smaller countries also are reported to have reservations about signing on the grounds that what they do have little impact on the great powers. U.S. diplomats hope that attitude will change, on grounds that the more who join the more effective the treaty will be.

One reason for their desire to enlist maximum participation is that while atomic power is limited today, it could spread in the future.

Passengers on Train in Narrow Brush With Death

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP)—A crowded express train from Athens, missing in the southern Yugoslav earthquake disaster area, arrived in Belgrade Saturday with all reported safe after a narrow brush with death.

The Athens-Cologne Hellas Express had just pulled into the station in Skopje when the earthquake struck that city at dawn Friday. The station building collapsed, and persons waiting to board were struck down by falling debris only 10 yards from the train itself.

However, the train was undamaged, and no one aboard was reported injured.

The express pulled out of Skopje for Belgrade soon after the devastating upheaval, but railway officials ordered it to a siding north of Skopje.

For the next 24 hours, emergency trains carrying relief supplies were given priority.

Talk of Shifting Freeman Grows

Agriculture Chief
Moving to Diplomacy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Talk of shifting Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman to the diplomatic field is growing in official circles—much of it being promoted by his friends and admirers.

Other close associates, however, discount such speculation and say Freeman expects to stay in his present post for two full Kennedy administrations.

Discussions of a transfer, for the most part, picture Freeman as ambassador to Mexico where he would be directed to help put more life into the lagging Alliance for Progress program to help Latin and South America develop their economies.

Wasted Talents
It is being said that Freeman's talents should not be wasted at the Agriculture Department where, some administration leaders say, there is little prospect for him or anyone else making progress toward adoption of Kennedy administration farm policies.

Freeman started out in 1961 to put into operation a broadened program of farmer-approved government commodity control programs designed to stabilize prices and supplies and eliminate surpluses. All hands agree that the secretary has worked diligently but he has met with little success.

The Democratic-controlled Congress refused to give him stricter control measures, except in the case of wheat. And wheat controls were rejected by farmers in a stunning administration defeat.

Passengers on Train in Narrow
Brush With Death
Movement of Freeman to another post presumably would make it easier for President Kennedy to revise his farm policies.

U. S. Denies Castro Is Shortchanged

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department denied a "completely without foundation" Saturday a Castro charge that the United States shortchanged Cuba $10 million in the prisoners' ransom deal.

It said both the American Red Cross which handled the shipment and the Canadian bank which unwound the deal have declared the deal completed.

Prime Minister Fidel Castro alleged in a speech Friday night that Cuba got only $43 million of drugs and food in exchange for last December's release of nearly 1,200 Bay of Pigs invasion prisoners, instead of the $53 million agreed on.

The key is Robert Huber of West Allis, a brewery salesman who is the veteran quarterback of the Democrats in the lower house. Huber had been publicly cool and privately critical toward the governor's concessions to the Republicans on the sales tax issue.

Unless he joins the governor's cause, most of the Democrats in the House will stand aside and the Republicans are likely to refuse to provide votes for a settlement of the impasse. As in the Senate, they insist that the bi-partisan tax and spending package must have a bi-partisan coalition of supporters on the roll calls.

Another danger in the Assembly is the fact that the Republicans there have been more insistent upon the piling of high spending requests than in the Senate. Any renewal of their demands might force a withdrawal of the governor from the compromise agreement. He has shown more insistence upon appropriation issues than on taxing methods. Perhaps no major legislative proposal in recent Wisconsin political history has been advanced with less conviction or with more reluctance than the complex budget and tax package which will be on Assembly desks Monday afternoon for a decisive vote.

Senators freely admitted that the program was liked by nobody, and that it was accepted only because no one could devise a reasonably acceptable alternative, and because the possibility of a collapse of basic state services was more repugnant to most of them.

Principal factor working for a settlement is the weariness months of Madison labors and of the legislators after seven long weeks of wrangle on the finance question.

The deepest desire of most of them is to dispose of the issue, clear the calendars of remaining general issues and to return to their homes and regular jobs.

Rail Adversaries Asked to Begin Collective Bargaining

Commerce Committee Cuts Short
Hearing on Kennedy Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Commerce Committee cut the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing Saturday on President Kennedy's proposed legislation to force railroads to begin collective bargaining with their employees.

Kennedy's proved would be effective for two years unless supplanted by negotiated agreements. Gilbert recommended instead that collective bargaining be required "under congressional direction and observation." He suggested that a special Senate-House committee be set up to serve as a watchdog and report on "who is dragging his heels."

Want No Legislation
Pastore and other Commerce Committee members made clear, however, that they hope Congress will not have to pass any legislation.

Gilbert testified that he was not yet in a position to form an opinion on the chances of a negotiated settlement.

He said the railroads want to eliminate nearly half the jobs of the 78,000 members of his union alone. He disputed management contentions that these jobs no longer are necessary for safe and efficient operations.

Opposes Plan
The only witness the committee heard was H.F. Gilbert, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (AFL-CIO), who strongly opposed Kennedy's proposal as a form of compulsory arbitration.

Under the measure, the four-year-old dispute over job-cutting work rules proposed by the railroad would be turned over to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Rules changes it would force railroads to begin collective bargaining with their employees.

Reports to Kennedy on Moscow Pact

BY KARL BAUMAN

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—W. Averell Harriman said Saturday night the test ban treaty initiated in Moscow is "a very important first step" in improved East-West relations, and that it in no way inhibits the use of nuclear weapons in war.

Harriman, undersecretary of state for political affairs, held a news conference after making a report to President Kennedy on his talks with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Harriman returned just Saturday from Moscow, where he was the chief U.S. negotiator of the treaty to ban atmospheric, space and underwater nuclear tests.

Personal Message
He brought a personal message from Khrushchev to Kennedy. He declined to characterize its tone or to divulge its contents.

One official described it as "very friendly."

Harriman's 12-minute news conference followed a 30-minute meeting with Kennedy at the summer White House on Squaw Island.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk and William C. Foster, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, were among the conferees.

Rusk is expected to go to Moscow late next week for the formal signing of the test ban agreement which Harriman initiated on behalf of the United States.

No Inhibitions
Harriman said questions of whether the agreement would in-

Tito Pledges New City Will Go Up Over Skopje Ruins

Burial Squads Dig Into Earth
For Victims of Killer Earthquake

SKOPJE, Yugoslavia (AP)—A statement issued in Belgrade Saturday night to raise President Tito's government pledged a new city on the ruins of Skopje, even as burial squads dug into the still trembling earth for quick interment of 630 recovered dead from Friday's killer quake.

The casualty count rose inexorably as rescue crews pressed their grim task of digging through ruins of countless buildings.

The only eight Americans known to be in the area emerged safe and sound.

But a joint statement from the government and central committee of the Communist Party said that a number of foreigners were victims of the catastrophe that struck this Macedonian metropolis and tourist center of 270,000 persons.

Grave Injuries
The statement said that 630 bodies had been recovered and more than 2,000 persons injured, half of them gravely. It added the actual number of victims is "considerably greater, but their number cannot be exactly determined since the excavation of rubble is still under way."

Red Cross authorities estimated 2,000 persons may have perished and a city official expressed fear the toll might reach 6,000.

"Truly, it is the worst catastrophe in Yugoslavia's history," an anguished President Tito said at the conclusion of a first-hand inspection tour of the city that had been a bustling showplace for his independent brand of communism.

He said the desolation, pain and wreckage were more terrible than he could have imagined.

Dadian Vanquishes Schlicht To Win State Golf Crown

Becomes First Publinx Player To Take Title in 62 Years

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Archie Dadian, 27, hiked his advantage to 4-up after the first public links player came to capture the Wisconsin State Amateur Golf championship when he defeated 20-year-old Ralph "Butch" Schlicht of Madison 4 and 3 Saturday.

The 26-year-old Dadian won the crown on the 33rd hole at Blue Mound Country Club when his younger opponent three putted. Dadian and Schlicht, the tournament's medalist, fired par 70s in the morning round under a blustering sun but the husky Milwaukee County champion held a one up lead.

NEW YORK (AP)—Tom Tresh and Joe Pepitone drove in all the New York Yankees runs in a 5-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday as Ralph Terry won his 11th with a seven-hitter. Harmon Killebrew's 23rd homer leading off the ninth spoiled Terry's shut-out bid.

Curt Simmons Achieves Ninth Triumph

CHICAGO (AP) — The surging St. Louis Cardinals came from behind Saturday to win their ninth field of the last 11 games by hanging a 3-2 kayo on the Chicago Cubs.

The second Chicago run was the result of a fluke — three wild pitches. It was scored by Jimmy Schaffer, running for catcher Dick Bertell, who singled to open the eighth inning.

Ron Taylor, second of the win and then got across himself on a combination of George Altman's outfield fly and Julian Javier's infield out.

St. Louis gave Simmons an insurance run in the eighth when Curt Flood doubled, and scored on Dick Groat's second single.

This Safety lifted Groat's league batting average a single percentage point to .343.

Gros, McGee Score TDs in Packer Tilt

Intrasquad Game Won by Offense, 17-7, Before Record Crowd of 9,280

BY ART DALEY
Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — The offense rolled up 463 yards, two touchdowns and a field goal. The defense intercepted three passes, recovered a fumble and hit receiver hard. And a record crowd of 9,280 sat in on the Packers' annual intrasquad game at City Stadium Saturday afternoon.

This was the Packers' first public dress rehearsal before the All-Star game in Chicago Friday night.

The final score was 17 to 7 and, of course, the Packer offense won. But it was tough and go for awhile. The defense took a 7-0 lead when Bill Forester intercepted a Terry Zang pass and returned 30 yards for a touchdown.

But the offense snapped with Jerry Kramer's 22-yard field goal and two touchdowns — a 2-yard scamper by Earl Gros and a 40-yard pass from Bart Starr to Max McGee. Starr worked up all three scores.

Sprinkling of Rookies It was a dog-fight in humid 85-degree heat. And both sides showed why they ranked first in the league in 1962 — even with a sprinkling of rookies.

The Packers showed off a new defensive end, Urban Henry, who apparently can step right into Bill Quinlan's shoes, a new man-in-motion offense, lots of rock and sock, and reversible running backs.

Coach Vince Lombardi termed the scrimmage "fair for this stage of the season," and noted a number of high spots.

"We did a lot of little silly things, like those interceptions. Wendie, Schollander is the holder and we were walking out of the with two others of the listed huddle in the second half," the coach

The Packers used their new offensive formation — sort of a spread or a double wing, with one back behind the center, and two out wider — considerably. In fact, Vince said "we used it just once last year." Asked what to call the formation, he said "some kind of man-in-motion."

The coach said that all of the running backs played halfback and fullback except Elijah Pitts.

Look Sharp

In addition, Vince pointed out that "Starr and Roach looked sharp. Barnes is faster and seems more sure of himself, it looks as if we got ourselves a defensive end (Henry), and Nitschke will be ready for the All-Star game."

Ray Nitschke was held out of the squad game due to a back injury.

Each of the three quarterbacks had an interception but Starr came up with mid-season figures, 14 completions in 20 attempts for 192 yards. Roach had three completions in seven throws for 74 yards and Zang had two out of three for 10.

Rushwise, big Jim Taylor carried five times for 12 yards before going out with a leg injury early in the game. Vince pointed out that it was his intention to use Jim sparingly in the pre-season campaign. Earl Gros and Tom Moore led the rushers with 48 yards apiece, while Pitts got 35. Lew Carpenter, sore ribs and all, 28 Frank Mestnik carried four times for 12 yards and Bob Brezina two for four. Gros ran 12 times for 49 yards and Carpenter 8 times for 20 yards.

Ron Kramer led the pass catchers with five grabs for 59 yards and one was a dilly — a stretching scoop of the ball just before

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves pushed over two three innings, but the Braves runs off reliever Jim Owens in the seventh inning to come from behind for a 5-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday. Pinch

Owens took over in the seventh in an attempt to protect a 4-3 lead for starter Joey Jay who had been lifted for a pinch hitter. Ed die Mathews greeted him with a triple and scored the tying run on Henry Aaron's third hit, a single.

Aaron went to second on Lee Maye's sacrifice and stole third. With a count of 2-1 on Mack Jones, left-hander Bill Henry replaced Owens and Bolling batted for Jones. Bolling bunted Henry's first pitch toward the mound and Aaron scored easily.

The Reds jumped off to a 3-0 lead in the first inning. Owens

Clayton Ewing, Crew Win Acclaim in England By Sailing Atlantic 1,000 Miles Without Rudder

BY JOHN TORINUS, JR.
Post-Crescent News Service

LONDON, England — "A bloody good show!" That was the refrain that the pub master kept repeating over his mug of bitter beer as he heard the story of how Clayton Ewing, one-time resident of Green Bay, and his crew aboard the 58-foot-yawl Dyna finished the last 1,000 miles of the Transatlantic Sailing Race without a rudder.

In the middle of gale conditions, the rudder post sheared, and the Dyna was left wallowing and nearly awash. The boat broached and veered back and forth up to 50 and 60 degrees off its course in winds which reached speeds of 45 miles an hour. In addition, fog surrounded the 14 competing ships for most of the crossing and the temperatures dropped to the mid-40's each night.

Then the spinnaker pole snapped and the spinnaker itself ripped. The boat was tipped nearly on its side for a half an hour and the 40 degree waters were lapping against the last side weather board, almost pouring disastrously into the cabin. Finally the Dyna was righted and year-old son who was also aboard, said that even though the boat was still sailable, the crew was almost "completely demoralized" the first day after the mishap.

The crew immediately tried to bring the boat under control, but the disappointment was special-proved useless. At that point, the Dyna Skipper Ewing was on the verge of turning on the power and dis-appeared before the rudder sank to qualifying the handsome yawl from the race.

Packers Favored By 16 Points, But 'Stars Are Hopeful'

Collegians Have Collection of Big Secondary Men This Year

BY JERRY LISK

CHICAGO (AP)—Although they are almost three touchdowns underdogs the College All-Stars still may find a chink in the tough armor of the National Football League champion Green Bay Packers in the 30th All-Star Game at Soldier Field Friday night.

The midsummer grid classic under the lights Aug. 2 will find pro-wise Coach Otto Graham marshaling the biggest, toughest and most talented graduates of the 1962 collegiate grid crop for this season's meeting with the Packers.

The Packers won 42-20 last year, but only 21-20 entering the final period. It took a record-breaking performance by Green Bay's quarterback, Bart Starr, to give the pros their fourth straight triumph in the series.

Friday night's contest will be televised and broadcast nationally by ABC starting at 8:45 p.m. EST. The champion Packers will be lacking suspended star, Paul Hornung, who with Jim Taylor, accounted for more than half of Green Bay's 125 rushing yards against the 1962 All-Stars.

Five TD Passes

Hornung gained 32 yards on only six carries against Taylor's 39 on 13 thrusts in a Packers' ground threat that helped set up a record five touchdown passes in a series by Starr.

The early line has Green Bay pegged a 16-point favorite, but Graham may have rounded up a giant-killing array in his sixth consecutive All-Star head man assignment.

Graham and his staff, including Dick Stanfel, Tommy O'Connell, Johnny Sauer, Dante Lavelli, and Mike Scarry, have worked since July 11 with a 49-player squad beefed by some 15 behemoths weighing at least 250 pounds, a quartet of fine running quarterbacks and a batch of rugged backs.

There also is a big collection of big secondary men, which is quite important against the sharp aerial shots of Green Bay's passers. Lack of height in key defensive back positions hurt the all-stars the last year.

So did what Graham now concedes was a tactical blunder—failure to keep Kansas' John Hadl at quarterback after a hot year, but only 21-20 entering the final period. It took a record-breaking performance by Green Bay's quarterback, Bart Starr, to give the pros their fourth straight triumph in the series.

This time if Oregon State's Terrell Baker, Wisconsin's Ron Van der Kelen, Sonny Gibbs of Texas, or Mississippi's Glynn Griffing shows a hot quarterback hand early, one of the four may be given every chance to make it a one man show.

The last All-Star victory came in 1956—Graham's first All-Star when Bobby Mitchell of Illinois placed the collegians to a 39 on 13 thrusts in a Packers' ground threat that helped set up a record five touchdown passes in a series by Starr.

The individual brilliance of some 1963 All-Star again may counteract the pro advantages of well-honed team-work, great talent and abundant experience.

Graham's ball-toting crew includes such speedsters as Larry Ferguson of Iowa, Charlie Mitchell of Washington and Rob Paremore of Florida A & M and such blasters as Ben Wilson of Southern California, Bill Thornton of Nebraska and Roger Kochman of Penn State.

Heralded Ends

It's a safe bet that Graham's passers will try early and often to find a consistent target—either one of the fast backs or such heralded ends as Wisconsin's Pat Richter (Vanderkelen's Badger battery mate), Washington State's Hugh Campbell and Northwestern's Paul Flatley, actually a flanker back.

The All-Star defense may huddle around 225-pound Penn State tackle Chuck Sieminski and line-backers Lee Roy Jordan of Alabama, Lee Roy Caffey of Texas A&M and Arkansas' Danny Brabham.

The college offensive line, averaging 250 and including tackles Bob Vogel and Daryl Sanders of Ohio State, guard Ed Budde and center Dave Behnman of Michigan State and Clemson's guard Don Chuy.

The All-Star game series, a presentation of the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., has funneled almost $2½ million into Chicago charities since its inception in 1934.

St. Timothy '9' Wins Title In Softball League

MENASHA — St. Timothy won the second half championship in the Menasha Church Softball League by topping Trinity Lutheran, 7-4, Friday night while St. Mary, which had been tied with the two for the lead, was upset by Blue Inn, 14-7.

St. Timothy will meet first half winner Trinity at a date and time still to be announced for the grand championship.

Ken Houg hurled St. Timothy's triumph. Willie Karnopp was the loser. Blue Inn collected only seven hits but received 16 walks in its verdict over St. Mary.

First Congregational was a forfeit victor over St. John.

Lock Celebrates Birthday With Power Display

Belts Two Homers, Double, Has 5 RBIs In Senators' 8-4 Win

DETROIT (AP) — Don Lock celebrated his 27th birthday Saturday by driving in five runs with two homers, a double and a sacrifice fly as the last-place Washington Senators continued their mastery over the Detroit Tigers 8-4.

Claude Osteen pitched the Senators to within 6½ games of the ninth place Tigers. Washington made it two victories in a row in what manager Gil Hodges calls a big series for his club and has beaten the Tigers six times in eight meetings.

Osteen recorded the 21st victory by a left hander over Detroit in 25 decisions. All three Detroit runs were unearned.

Lock drove in Washington's first run in the opening inning with his fly ball and doubled in the next two runs in the third off loser Hank Aguirre. He homered in the fifth and seventh. Don Zimmer also homered for Washington in the seventh.

The Senators, also greatly troubled by left-handed pitching, beat a southpaw for only the sixth time against 21 losses.

The defeat was Detroit's fourth straight.

U. S. Trackmen Score Easy Victory Over Polish Team

Carr Ties 200-Meter Meet Record; American Girls Lose

BY JIM BECKER

WARSAW (AP) — The United States track and field team, striking back after a close call in Moscow, finished up with a one-sided 125-83 victory over Poland—rated the second best team in Europe—in their two-day dual meet Saturday.

The Yankees won 16 of the 20 events over the two days. That was an all-time high for this series, dating back to 1958.

The United States has now won all four meetings. The Americans rolled up their biggest margin, 131-81, last year in Chicago.

The American girls, under fire for a happy-go-lucky attitude, buckled down, too, and lost only by 58-47 to the Polish women, their best showing. The score last year was 62-45.

The American men, billed as the strongest team ever sent abroad and starting to show it now, grabbed six of the final 10 events on the program, and finished with a meet record 3:03.6 performance in the 1,600 meter relay.

The Poles were disqualified for a faulty baton pass.

This Meet Mark

Henry Carr of Arizona State tied the meet mark in the 200 meters with a smooth-striding 20.8 seconds, and Paul Drayton edged Poland's veteran sprinter, Marian Fok to second place. Fok holds the record tied by Carr, and had won the race in the last two United States-Poland meets.

That was the second of two American doubles on the final day. The first one came in the opening event, the 400 meter hurdles, when Rex Cavley of Pasadena led Jim Allen of Seattle to the line in 50.8 seconds.

The 400 meter hurdles set the happy tone for this meet, a sharp contrast to the grim struggle at the Moscow last week—especially. He snapped his own meet mark, set in 1958.

Polish stars won the last two events before the relay to pull the home forces up a bit. Kazimierz Zimny toyed with the field and it was obvious to everyone in the press box that Cavley had won.

That happened often both days. It was anything but a crisply run meet, although the athletes on both sides seemed to have lots of fun.

Performances were generally off world standards.

The only world record was the pole vault Friday, when John Pannel of Miami, Fla., shaded his own mark by a couple of milli-meters with a leap of 16 feet, 8 inches (5.10 meters). That was accomplished in darkness and confusion in the Tenth Anniversary Stadium — which has no 21 feet ¾ inch was only a lights—and only hours after one shade off her best.

American reporter incorrectly described Pannel as seriously hurt. In Three Events

The Americans beat back Polish hopes for victory in three events today—the shot put, 3,000 meter steeplechase and the high jump. Dave Davis edged Poland's giant Alfrid Sogornik in the shot, with a heave of 61 feet, 7 inches to 61-½.

Pat Traynor of Philadelphia surprised in the steeplechase and Gene Johnson of Santa Clara, Calif., went 6-11 in the high jump.

The day's only real struggle on the track was the 800 meters. Jim Dupree of Los Angeles overhauled Poland's Witold Baran on the backstretch and beat off Baran's challenge down the finishing stretch to win by four yards in 1:48.2.

A chill wind hampered the athletes on the final day, in contrast to the 90 degree temperature in which the meet started. The breeze also drove to cover the bikini-clad maidens on the banks of the Vistula River, a bonus view for the spectators.

The meet drew about 90,000 for the two days, 50,000 on opening day.

The Poles won only the triple jump, javelin and 5,000 meters following the hammer throw Friday.

A couple of Poland's finest runners were injured and unable to run, although the Americans were missing some stars, too.

Harold Connolly, hammer winner at Moscow, left the team after that meet, along with Jay Silverster and Rink Babka, 1-2 in the discus, and Parry O'Brien, second in the shot in Russia.

Dave Weill, the Stanford discus thrower, missed signals and competed in Czechoslovakia instead. Josef Smid of Poland, the world's best triple jumper, set his country's only meet mark when he went an even 5 feet in the shot.

Indians Win on Francona's Hit

Double to Right Field Gives Cleveland 3-2 Victory Over A's

CLEVELAND (AP)—Tito Francona lined a double to right center in the ninth inning to knock in the run that gave the Cleveland Indians a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Athletics Saturday.

The Athletics whacked Early Wynn hard, getting two runs on eight hits in 4-1-3 innings before chasing the 43-year-old right-hander who was bidding for his 301st career victory.

Singles by Bobby Del Greco, Wayne Causey and Norm Siebern produced a run in the first frame. A single by pitcher Diego Segui and a triple by Gino Cimoli made it 2-0 in the fifth. On Cimoli's line drive, center fielder Willie Kirkland misjudged the ball and it sailed over his head.

The Indians tied the score with two unearned runs in the fifth inning. A walk and errors by Del Greco and Ed Charles loaded the bases. Kirkland's fly ball delivered one run and Max Alvis' single scored the other, but Larry Brown was cut down at the plate on a fine throw by left fielder Ken Harrelson.

Stock Market Finds Reason To Crow About

OTC Shares Have Recovered Faster Than Listed Shares

AP News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—The biggest stock market of them all has taken its full share of lumps in the last year but today finds at least one reason to crow. The National Security Traders Association says leading stocks on the over-the-counter market have been recovering recently at a faster rate than the popular averages of stocks listed on the exchanges.

It was the OTC market that saw some of the most spectacular rises in the speculative stock spheres of 1961—and some of the most disastrous (and sometimes scandalous) dips in the first half of 1962. The fastest climbs and dizziest drops often came in fledgling issues, the kind that aren't listed on the nation's stock exchanges but are tried out over the counter.

It was the OTC that drew much fire of the Securities & Exchange Commission when it asked Congress last month for new powers over stock trading, the persons who sell them, the companies involved and especially the new issues.

OTC Lagged

And in the last half of 1962, when the stock exchanges were making strong recoveries from the lows reached in June 1962, trading over the counter lagged, and so did prices of its stocks on average.

Trading is still slow over the counter, compared with the pick-up on the exchanges, where volume is sizably larger than a year ago.

While the OTC market is too large for full records of trading volume, some leading firms estimate sales to be about 20 per cent below last year.

But the National Quotation Bureau, which reports on stocks actively traded over the counter, says its industrial stock average rose 14.11 per cent in the first half of 1963. The Dow-Jones industrial index gained 8.4 per cent in the six months, and Standard & Poor's 500 listed stock average rose 9.93 per cent.

The bureau says its OTC price averages "like those for listed stocks are based primarily on representative blue chip issues and are therefore comparable to leading listed stock averages."

50,000 High Mark

Stocks listed on the exchanges are also sold over the counter, but most of the business is in unlisted issues (estimated as high as 50,000). The exchanges are called auction markets because all buy and sell orders are received there and eventually matched by the brokers.

OTC is a negotiated market because sales are made by negotiation between broker-dealers, largely by private telephone, and often in different parts of the country. Some 4,600 of them belong to the National Association of Securities Dealers, which police the market under SEC supervision. About 5,500 individuals whose profession is trading in the OTC market belong to its industry group, the National Security Traders Association.

The new rules asked by the SEC would compel all securities firms to belong to NASD or some other self-policing unit, tighten requirements for entering the business, and give SEC stricter controls over the concerns and their employees.

The SEC also wants some 3,600 industrial and utility companies, banks and insurance companies, whose unlisted stocks are traded over the counter (those firms with 750 or more stockholders) to follow the same financial disclosure, proxy and insider-trading rule that apply to companies listed on exchanges.

Banks and insurance companies particularly are objecting to this, preferring federal and state agencies already regulating them.

Exchange officials feel that the new rules would lead many now unlisted industrial and utility firms to apply for listing—reducing by that much the size of the big OTC market.

But the multitude of companies too small in assets, with too few stockholders or too low in trading volume, to meet exchange requirements probably will continue to be a mainstay of the OTC market, whatever Congress may do about stricter federal policing.

And Wall Street will watch the counter as one sign of the return of the little fellow to stock buying or of his burnt-finger dallying on the sidelines.

Medical Tests Slated For Singer B. Darin

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—Bobby Darin's physician said Friday he wants the singer to return to California next week for extensive medical tests.

The 27-year-old entertainer, who has been appearing at Freedland, an amusement park in the Bronx, N.Y., collapsed twice this week from apparent fatigue.

Dr. Marvin Levy said he may hospitalize the singer.

Pet Goes For 'Dog's Life' With Own Summer Vacation at Kennel

BY ALICE FULTON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

He sits, with tentatively wagging tail and puzzled eyes, viewing the confusion and clutter of his family packing for a vacation trip, wondering, perhaps, if he is going into the car with all that baggage.

His family also is considering what to do with their pet. They may decide to leave him with friends, with no certainty he'll be there when they return. Or they may decide on a boarding kennel—not without a guilt complex over "locking the dog up" and "deserting" him.

As to all this fretting, kennel owners say, "Don't!" A pet enjoys the break from routine as much as his owners do. Animals get as excited over returning to a doggy world as humans do returning to civilization after a winter with Arctic seals. One veterinarian observed, "The dogs are fine. Send their owners off with a tranquilizer."

Like Owner, Like Dog

Left sitting like a young camper among his personal belongings (blanket, favorite toys, sometimes individual menu), the pet immediately, by his behavior, begins to tell tales about his owners. "There isn't a single human neurosis that dogs haven't developed too," reports Bud Larimer, owner of Bud's Barker House, route 1, Neenah.

Larimer can't remember when he's had a good old fashioned dog. Even their diseases aren't of the ordinary worm or distemper variety. He recently boarded two epileptic dogs that required medication.

After the first pangs of loneliness — usually no longer than a few days for the most forlorn newcomer—the dogs sometimes do a fantastic turnabout in their behavior. If at first, Larimer says, they "lie there and sob" with homesickness, they are soon chewing cheerfully on their beds and joining in yappy conversations with other dogs.

Everything but Television

There isn't a trick the experienced kennel owners miss in making their pet communities happy ones. All of the kennels have inside and outside runs, and most have heating systems to keep the floors at room temperature. Custom-made beds, an intercommunication system between kennel and house, and cooling fans in the summer heat are provided by different kennels. Mrs. Mike Schultz of Schultz Boarding Kennels, Highway 45, Neenah, finds nothing beats the chatter of a baseball game broadcast to keep dogs quiet on torrid days.

Cats are agreeable boarders. Mrs. Dorothy Worzalla, Winsette Boarding Kennels, route 1, Neenah, says cats are happy if they're dry, warm and fed. And a veterinarian observed that cats have better nervous systems. It seldom takes them longer than a day to adjust to the move.

Hunger strikes—one of the kennel owners' main problems—are something the more emotional dog may try for a few days. Liver sausage and personal attention help weaken his resolves, and after the third day the strike is broken—without a compromise. He's left his brooding for doggy fun.

Kennel Society Is Selective

Discrimination may be unjust and illegal in the human hotel business, but kennel owners practice it openly. It's fortunate too, for most of them accept only healthy animals, ensuring the safety of all their boarders. Only those with special facilities board cats—species makes a big difference in the pet world.

But there is some place for even the weirdest comer.

Veterinarians, whose boarding is mainly a hospital service for sick animals, have accepted crocodiles, garter snakes, parakeets, and even an ocelot.

Great animal lovers themselves, the kennel operators understand the concern their customers have for family pets. They agree that one of the business' biggest rewards is the appreciation of their clients, who know their pet's vacation will be safe and comfortable. Mrs. Schultz reassures worried families with the poem "Observations," which appeared in the Green Bay Kennel Club Catalogue.

Still dubious about the happiness of that irreplaceable pet? Mrs. Worzalla tells a story about a black Labrador she boarded occasionally for a nearby doctor's family. With exasperating regularity, the dog turned up on her doorstep when he was supposed to be at home. Thinking the dog sought companionship, the doctor bought a cocker spaniel puppy to keep the pet happy. But as soon as the puppy was sturdy enough he was trotting along with the Labrador on his visits to the kennel.

"If you take another step I'll scream." The beagle of Rabbi and Mrs. Gilbert A. Silverstein is not too keen about intruders of his peaceful vacation at a boarding kennel.

Observations of a Kennel Owner

BY MRS. MIKE SCHULTZ

*Is your cocker off his rocker?
Has your poodle lost his noodle?
Is your Scotty getting naughty?
Or your doxie getting foxie?*

*Dogs do get bored the same as we
With the daily grind—monotony;
They welcome a change when you're away,
They're yappy, happy when here for a stay.*

*"He will be lonesome, I know he won't eat!
I brought his blanket and here's his treat
I know how he'll miss me, boo hoo hoo hoo."*

*But for Fido it's an escape from the constant "No no!"
A chance to recoup his doggy ego.
Soon he's happily engrossed in doggy affairs,
With watching his neighbors and putting on airs.*

Nuclear Treaty May Cut Defense Costs

Sen. Mansfield Also Calls for Republican Support; Dirksen Wants Close Scrutiny of Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said Saturday the nuclear test ban treaty may serve as a brake on defense spending.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., called for a searching examination of the pact.

Mansfield, the Senate Democratic leader, appealed for Republican support for an agreement with Russia and Britain to ban all except underground testing.

Dirksen, the Senate GOP leader, withheld any commitment. He said in an interview that the terms of the treaty must be subjected to minute examination before the Senate is called upon to ratify it. But he indicated he would not oppose action in this session of Congress.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Undersecretary W. Averell Harriman, who negotiated the treaty in Moscow, will testify on it at a closed session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Monday morning.

Mansfield is well aware that he will need Republican support to ratify the two-thirds Senate majority required for ratification.

He said in a statement that while the agreement would not be likely to justify any cutback in defense spending, it could provide "a stabilization rather than an increase of those expenditures."

"If this agreement is approved it does not mean that there will be total or unilateral disarmament either soon or in the future," he said.

Clear Water

"What this new agreement will give us is more clean water and food for our children, less stratum to pollute the air, and some basis for hoping that future generations will grow up as normal, healthy human beings."

Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., said in a separate statement that President Kennedy had stated the case for the treaty well in a speech Saturday night — "that the known risks of a test ban are not as dangerous to our security as the nuclear arms race."

But Cooper said the administration is going to have to provide every senator with the "fullest information — political, military and scientific, which bears on the proposed treaty."

Ask Christians To Join Civil Rights March

Call Comes During Meeting of Catholic Interracial Councils

CHICAGO (AP) — Calls for thousands of white Christians to join in the civil rights march in Washington next month were sounded Saturday at a national meeting of Roman Catholics.

The bids for mass support of the move for adoption of civil rights legislation came from both Catholic and Protestant leaders. They spoke before an audience of laymen and clergymen at an emergency conference of representatives of the 57 Roman Catholic interracial councils across the country.

Dr. Robert Spike, director of the Commission on Religion and Race of the National Council of Churches, said his organization will take part in the demonstration planned for Aug. 28 in the nation's capital.

Wants Thousands
"We must get thousands of white Christians to Washington in that March," Dr. Spike told the gathering of whites and Negroes.

"We are committed to go all the way with our brethren," Mathew Ahmann, executive director of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice, sponsor of the meeting, urged organized Catholic support for civil rights measures.

Ahmann, a layman, said he hopes to see thousands of white Catholics in the Washington parade, and he plans to lead a delegation of members of his church.

Ahmann said he personally likes President Kennedy's civil rights bill including the holy disputed public accommodations provision.

"I expect more involvement in direct action," Ahmann said in a speech. "I expect action on the picket line. I expect extensive Catholic participation in the march on Washington."

Urban League Convention Begins Today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Urban League, devoted to improving the lot of Negroes in big cities, begins its national convention Sunday.

Although the sessions come at a time of racial tension in much of the nation, league spokesmen say they expect no fireworks. The organization concentrates on social work, rather than political aspects of the civil rights drive.

Convention activities reflect the league's four-point program: expansion of opportunities for Negroes in the fields of employment, education, housing and welfare.

About 1,000 delegates from 65 cities in which the league operates are expected for sessions lasting through Thursday.

The opening day highlight is an evening keynote address by Atty. Gen. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts, first Negro to hold such a post.

The league has 500 salaried professional social workers, aided by 5,000 committee members and volunteers working in 30 states and the District of Columbia.

Young estimates that it serves about 77 per cent of the Negro population in urban centers of 100,000 or more, or more than 10 million Negroes throughout the country.

Southern Railway Confirms Hiring 100 Firemen With No Specific Duties

BY ROBERT M. LEWIN

Chicago Daily News Service

CHICAGO — The Southern Railway has just hired as locomotive firemen 100 unemployed Negroes — aged 60 to 85 years — who never worked on a railroad. All they do for a day's pay is ride in the diesel of freight trains.

The Southern Railway told the Daily News that a railroad supervisor "goes along on the first trips to show the new fireman where to sit and the location of the comfort station in the locomotive — not to train or teach him anything for there is nothing for him to learn."

The most troublesome issue in the critical work rules dispute, over which the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers threaten a nationwide strike is the railroad's demand for the right to eliminate firemen from freight and yard service diesels.

Not Involved
The Southern, the country's 12th longest railroad, operating more than 8,000 miles of track in Illinois, 12 other states and the District of Columbia, is not involved in the national railroad case.

It pulled out three years ago because it wanted to "concentrate on the firemen's issue which represents the greatest waste of money."

"Since firemen have no duties at all to perform, no skills, training, physical standards or education are required," the Southern said, explaining that it had hired the 100 firemen merely to comply with a court order.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers had sued the Southern in U.S. District Court in Washington. The union had accused the railroad of not complying with the contract by failing to use firemen on all runs and by not hiring new men.

"In the circumstances, it seemed reasonable to employ unskilled, elderly people who are having a hard time finding jobs," the Southern added.

Union Wages
"Their only job is to sit in a seat. They are paid standard union wages."

The sitting firemen get $20 to $25 a day.

The union is furious.

Henry E. Gilbert, president of the brotherhood, accused the Southern of a "spiteful disrespect of the court order."

The union is threatening to file contempt of court action against the railroad.

But the Southern, whose president is D. William Brosnan, takes the position that the contract "doesn't require the hiring of new firemen and its obligation is only to those already on the seniority list of firemen."

The Southern said that the matter now is before the National Railroad Adjustment Board for interpretation. The railroad added that in the union's lawsuit, the court ruled that "although the court was without jurisdiction, Southern should have firemen until the adjustment board decides the question of rule interpretation."

The brotherhood had ordered a strike against the Southern for last Jan. 13 over the railroad's refusal to hire new firemen, but U. S. Judge Leonard P. Walsh issued an injunction in Washington prohibiting a strike.

Central of Georgia
The brotherhood protested that it has firemen members on the Central of Georgia railroad, which the Southern bought June 17, who are not working and should have been hired instead of the 100 in experienced men.

Southern said that it has given employment to practically all Central of Georgia firemen whose jobs were cut off by consolidation of Central of Georgia and Southern facilities.

Until two weeks ago, when the brotherhood held its 90th anniversary convention, Negroes were barred from membership. The convention, after a bitter fight, removed the "color bar" so that the constitution would comply with the AFT-CIO constitution which bans racial discrimination.

The brotherhood said its contract requires applicants for firemen's jobs to "be able to read and write and possess a standard watch."

It complained that Southern did not apply those requirements in its new hirings.

"Both sides have agreed to do so," he told reporters. "And I hope there will be a whole series of discussions as to how far progress can be made."

Bomb Pact Has Hopeful Glimmer

Moscow Treaty Obvious First Step in Halting Arms Race

BY BAKER MARSH

Chicago Daily News Service

A treaty can be anything from a scrap of paper to a flame of hope.

There is every indication that the agreement initiated in Moscow this week leans to the hopeful side.

The brief, uncluttered treaty would outlaw nuclear testing in the atmosphere, space and underwater. Underground tests are permitted.

It is described as an obvious first step toward ending the nuclear arms race.

In fact, it is probably an indication that the arms race is running down of its own accord.

Both the United States and Russia are reported to have far more than enough bombs to wipe each other off the earth. Considering the expense, why build more?

France, which was not invited to the Moscow talks, contends that anything like the present treaty is useless. President Charles de Gaulle argues that what is needed is a broader agreement to destroy all existing nuclear stockpiles and the vehicles for delivering them and to prohibit their future production.

Still, the present agreement is a first step and considering the time it took the world can only hope the next step will be quicker.

The story had its beginnings in 1946 when the U.N. General Assembly adopted a U.S. plan for international control and inspection of atomic energy facilities.

The Soviet Union, which had not exploded its first bomb at that time, turned it down.

In 1951 the United States, Britain and France offered a plan for regulation of armaments and nuclear weapons. The Soviets turned that down also.

In 1955 President Eisenhower presented his famous "open skies" inspection plan. It met the same fate.

Then in 1957 the Russians made their first constructive move. They said they would permit on-site inspection of underground tests.

When the surprise wore off, talks were opened in Geneva. The discussions have been held off and on ever since, culminating in the Moscow agreement Thursday.

There is still much to be done. France is planning another round of tests in the air. Red China is expected to develop a bomb soon and China, like France, is not bound by the treaty.

Castro remains in Cuba. Germany is still divided and there is no crack in the Berlin Wall.

The communist armies of the Warsaw Pact still face the free world armies of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

But on the cheerful side Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev has pledged to "go on doing everything" to ease international tensions.

56 Children Overcome By Chlorine Gas at Pool

Reading, Pa. (AP)— Fifty-six children were overcome by chlorine gas when a valve jammed at a city operated swimming pool Friday. Two of them were in critical condition Saturday.

Andy Stopper, 46, athletic director at Reading High School and a pool employee, was in serious condition. Two other employees also were sickened by the gas that filled the pool area where 75 children were bathing.

Stopper told authorities the valve jammed when he tried to inject chlorine gas into the pool from a cylinder of liquid chlorine. The gas quickly dissipated.

Oleg Cassini is the author of this green crepe dress with a softly pleated skirt and red velvet blazer jacket. This costume was part of the Young America collection presented by the designer, who styles many clothes for the president's wife.

How to Look for dinner and the theater is shown by the model above, wearing a two-piece beige velvet costume by Mollie Parnis, a favorite designer of Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower. The outfit, with its high fur collar, was shown at the New York fall press preview.

Youth gets the nod in the fall fashion scene, and the woman who is an active, on-the-go, interesting person—the real mark of youth—is catered to in almost every designer's line. Ease of motion is concomitant to the lines, indicating fluidity and an awareness of the role played by today's busy American woman.

The fashions shown here were among those presented at the American Designers Group press Review in New York. Oleg Cassini, a favorite designer of Mrs. Kennedy, showed his young America collection. Mollie Parnis, Mamie Eisenhower's favorite couturier, also emphasized the look of youth, adding to it a touch of opulence.

The Girl on a Paycheck will appreciate this gray pinstriped dress by Oleg Cassini. It is low-belted, with long sleeves, and zips down the back. This dress was also part of the designer's Young America collection. (AP Wirephotos) ing them stand an hour or longer, then squeezing out the excess brine before mixing the slices with the dressing. This was once the common practice a generation or two ago when cucumbers were bitter. But this reason has disappeared because the occasional bitterness has been bred out of the commercial cucumbers which reach our produce counters today.

Cucumbers, thickly cut—about 1/4 to 1/2 inch—are very good as a hot vegetable. They need little more than 3 to 4 minutes sauteing in melted butter.

Facts and Furbelows

Add Cucumbers for 'Coolest' Menus

BY JUDY STELLWAGEN
County Home Economics Agent

This afternoon Mrs. Vincent Baum of Appleton called me and asked whether I knew how many pounds of cucumbers there were in a bushel. I found there were about fifty.

Perhaps some of you homemakers who make pickles could use this fact to see whether you are actually Miss Stellwagen paying less per pound if you buy a bushel of cucumbers at a time.

Every day, as it becomes hotter and muggier, we wonder what type of food to serve for dinner. If this has happened it's time for a chilled cucumber salad.

Cucumbers have been highly esteemed for their crisp and refreshing coolness for many centuries. Our expression, "cool as a cucumber" goes back at least four centuries to an unimportant English play called "Cupid's Revenge." This simile may have been used in the days of the Roman Emperor Tiberius who was mad for cucumbers. He had his cucumber beds on wheels so his slaves could wheel them about to catch all the sunshine.

Sunlight makes cucumbers grow rapidly, but, strangely enough the hottest rays never seem to penetrate the fruit. Scientists have poked thermometers into cucumbers still on the vines and have discovered that the inside was some 20 degrees cooler than the surrounding air.

Cucumbers are of two classes, "slicer" for salads and comparable fresh uses and "picklers" for pickling purposes. Slicers are generally white-spined, of uniform shape and round-ended. They run 6-8 inches in length, and are suitable for dill pickles and sliced pickles as well as salads. Pickling varieties produce numerous small, black-spined fruits. Because they are so small they are not well suited to salad use.

To peel, or not to peel, cucumbers for salads is a matter of choice. They look much more attractive with the dark green rim, especially if it is scored before slicing. The edible wax with which commercial cucumbers are treated to prevent wil-ing, is quite tasteless and harmless.

Most American cooks slice a well-chilled cucumber and serve it crisp. Some cooks still use the European method of lightly salting the sliced cucumbers and let-ing, is quite tasteless and harmless.

Service Project Initiates Friendship

Late in the winter, when things become dull and drab even for those who are active and 'on-the-go', members of the Chalice Circle of the King's Daughters turned their attention to those whose always limited activities are even more curtailed by the weather. They decided to do something different for our senior citizens.

A few hours away from the monotony of their everyday lives was offered to residents of the Appleton City home, as Circle members bundled them into warm automobiles and took them for drives around the city. The weekly excursions were climaxed by a tea at home of a member.

As the weather warmed and the trees began to leaf, the rides became longer, taking the oldest to Fremont, Calumet County Park and High Cliff State Park. In June, several carloads went to the Oshkosh Museum.

Spend Time at Home
In addition to taking the senior citizens away from their ordinary environment, three Circle members visit them at home once a month, spending the afternoon at cards or bingo, or presenting a program of slides.

The project, begun as a winter time affair, has now become a challenge to Circle members, who are busy seeking other special ways to extend the horizons of the golden agers. No longer strictly a service project, the program has opened the way to warm friendships, personal confidences, trust and expanding interests.

For the oldesters, and for the Chalice Circle too, one of the highlights of the summer was their recent picnic at Lutz Park. Smiles and expressions of serenity competed with sunshine for honors on a 'just right' day.

Mrs. Daniel Folsom has served as chairman, assisted by Mmes. Eugene Raney, Harold Donnelly, Edward Byrne, Clifford Vincent, George Pickett, Lyle Bauknecht and Vincent Derscheid.

Your Problems

Filling in Missing Curves Not New With Times, Says Reader

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN: May I have the last word in regard to the unfortunate girl who complained because she had a shape like an ironing board?

You told her to go to the lingerie store and buy what she needed. I thought your advice was top-notch but one reader wrote to say store-bought curves are dishonest and that such fakery is symbolic of the decay of American integrity.

May I tell you what happened when I was a ninth grade student, back in 1908? In those days the teachers wore shirt-waists and form-fitting, ankle-length skirts. Our history teacher, Miss Smith, was tall and slender with no hips at all, poor thing. Her long, straight skirts made her look seven feet tall.

One day she appeared in class with a beautiful figure. I was dying of curiosity — and being ten years old I hadn't yet learned it was impolite to ask personal questions. So I asked. This is what she said, "I made myself some hip-pads which I tie around my waist. What God has forgotten I made up with cotton."

So, you see, there's nothing new about it—Sea Willow.

Dear Willow: Thanks for the fascinating piece of history, and for a mighty catchy little couplet.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are in our early 50's and this is the second marriage for us both. I've always held a responsible job and managed my money affairs well. When Leonard was widowed ten years ago he turned over his financial matters to his eldest daughter. His wife had always managed the money so his oldest daughter took over where her mother had left off. Leonard handed over his pay check to her and she paid all the bills and gave him an allowance.

We've been married four months now and Leonard's daughter is still paying his bills and giving him an allowance.

I am very uncomfortable about this but don't know what to do. We are getting along fine and I don't want to rock the boat. Still this is like a bone in my throat.

Should I say nothing and hope in time he will offer to let me handle the family finance—or what?—Number Two.

Dear Two: Don't stand on one foot while you're waiting, Lady. It may be a very long wait—like maybe forever.

When Leonard had no wife, it was all right for his daughter to pinch hit, but now that he has a wife, the pinch hitter should be benched.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please print this for all girls who are going steady and are afraid to break up.

I went steady with Bart for a year. He was selfish and inconsiderate and I was miserable most of the time but I thought that was the way love was supposed to be.

One day I realized we were fighting all the time so I told him we'd better call it quits. He agreed but asked if we could date once in a while.

Three weeks went by and he didn't call. I was heartbroken. I regretted the break-up and came close to calling him and admitting it. But somehow I controlled myself.

Then I met Earle. After one date I knew what it was like to be treated like a lady. Earle was everything that Bart wasn't. Last night we ran into Bart at a party and for the first time I saw how crude, arrogant and phony he is. Now I could kick myself for being so dumb and wasting a whole year on him. Please pass the word.—Happier Now.

Dear Happier: Hooray for you. You were like that worm in the horseradish who thought it was the sweetest place in the world because it was the only place he'd ever seen. (P.S. Students, take note.)

Two senior scouts of the Fox River Area Girl Scout Council from Aug. 1 through 17. Conowingo, Md., will be the camp destination of Miss Paula Wetak, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Wetak, 602 E. Circle St. She will be there from Aug. 10 through Randall St., will attend Camp 26.

Approximately 650 girls from all parts of the United States will attend the 17-day encampments, staged to give Senior Scouts the opportunity to bring camping to more girls in their councils. Each will participate in a project of her own choice, will receive training at camp in how to conduct it, and will then carry it out. She will also explore ways to hold a similar event at home.

Miss Wetak and Miss Mueller have chosen projects that prepare troop leaders for days in the outdoors. They will prepare leaders in groups and individually by teaching the skills necessary for an outdoor day, will help leaders set up a troop meeting, attend the meeting, and participate in the outdoor day with leaders and troop. Upon their return, they will train local senior scouts in a similar way.

The girls have been preparing for the encampment by reviewing their own camping skills, researching program ideas and learning about the Fox River Area Council. Each has taken the Leader-in-Training Course and has worked as a program aide at Day Camp.

Young Family Enchanted by Life in Mysterious Far East

BY SENA GRAY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

"So many peculiar things have happened to us in our far eastern homes that it is hard to recall any particular instance," said Mrs. Douglas Grant, world-traveled young children have called Singapore, Bombay and Madras, India. Eisele, 707 W. Front St. She, their homes Eastern Branch of the First National City Bank, N. Y., and two in March to obtain therapy for Pam who had contracted polio. They were joined by Mr. Grant in June. The family left Appleton Monday to establish another new home in the Orient, this time in Hong Kong.

Key to Life

The adaptable family hasn't found it hard at all to fit into unusual surroundings. Because of Mr. Grant's position they become immediately "woven into the fabric of the business community." They have found the key to life in foreign lands is to take special care in adopting the customs of the country. Then fitting in becomes easier. These principals will again be put to work in their new home at Hong Kong. They have just spent a year at Madras where Mrs. Grant, the former Jacqueline Eisele, was blessed with nine household servants. To an American nine servants would seem a tremendous luxury, but in India it's the way of life. The caste system is very strong and each native has only particular duties he is allowed to fulfill. If he did a job out of his line he would be taking someone else's means of livelihood. The family cook-bearer was supervisor of the staff. He visited the market at 5 a.m. each day to get the freshest food at the best prices and he also prepared and served the food.

Caste System

The chokra had charge of second-boy duties such as scrubbing windows and floors. Nanny tended to the children's needs, washing their clothes by hand. Another example of the caste system occurred while the Grants vacationed in Nepal. While staying at the Royal Hotel at Kathmandu, kerosene from a lamp spilled in their hotel room and started a fire on the floor. They urged a bearer in the hall to help put out the flame. She refused. It was not part of her duties. They were also refused help by a couple of stewards. Finally they found a bearer low enough to assist.

Handy Indian Friends

The Grant children, Robbie, 8, and Pamela, 6½, acquired many Indian friends although they attended a British school in Madras. Their parents also made sure they had American and British friends because they didn't want the young children to forget "they are Americans."

While in Madras, Mrs. Grant made regular trips to the market place just to get the feel of it and know the prices. Consumer products, as they are known in the U.S., and luxury items are

Candlelight Ceremony Performed

MENASHA — Miss Sally Ann Thalke, escorted to the altar by her grandfather, William Holtz, Oshkosh, became the bride of David Rocks Saturday. The Rev. Carl K. Towlev officiated at the 6 p.m. candlelight ceremony in St. Timothy Lutheran Church.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. Richard Thalke, 357 Madison St., and the late Mr. Thalke. Mr. Rocks' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Rocks, 639 Tayco St.

Miss Lana Lemke, Appleton, the bridegroom's cousin, was maid of honor. Acting as bridesmaids were Miss Mary Thalke, Waukegan, Ill., and Miss Karen Holtz, Oshkosh, both cousins of the bride, and Miss Linda Sturn, Miss Jacqueline Lehrer, the bridegroom's niece, served as flower girl.

Best man was Thomas Rocks, the bridegroom's brother. Groomsmen were William Behrendt, Scott Swamer, the bridegroom's cousin, and John Sipple. They are all from Appleton. The bridegroom's nephew, Michael Lehrer, was ring bearer. Ushers were John Holtz, Oshkosh, the bridegroom's nephew, and Daniel Lehrer, a brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

The couple was graduated from Menasha High School. The bride is employed at Wisconsin Tissue Mill and her husband at George Banta Co.

A reception and dance were held at Marathon Union Hall. After a honeymoon trip through northern Wisconsin, the couple will live at 408½ Walnut St.

not available so that the Grants changed their living and eating habits to adapt to those of the country. Their clothes were tailor made. Madras is famous for its bleeding plaid material, textiles, hides and skins. Raw silk, much desired by Americans, and ancient wood carvings from the temples are being transported out of Madras by the carloads. "I would have to go to Italy to purchase products of Madras," Mrs. Grant remarked.

Vegetarians

The Hindu religion governs the whole way of life in India. "Poverty was the worst shock," to Mrs. Grant. She was amazed at how little people can live on. The Hindus are vegetarians, but the Grants noted that when high class Indians entertain they always serve a couple of vegetable dishes prepared to look exactly like meat. "It even tasted like hamburger."

Jacque, being a vital young mother and wife, joined the American Woman's Club which is affiliated with such clubs all over the world. Members busy themselves with welfare work for the Indians, beggars, cripples and hospitals. When she arrives in Hong Kong she plans to join the American Woman's Club there.

The rewards of calling a foreign land "home" can be many, but for the Grants one was outstanding. "The children were very impressed with their own country upon returning to the United States."

Judy Stellwagen Begins 'Dream' Career

Young Home Economics Agent Finds First Job Full of Challenge

Post-Crescent Women's Editor

"I was worried at first about being young—afraid people would say, 'What can you know?', but everyone's been so nice. It's much better than I expected."

Miss Judy Stellwagen, a June graduate of the University of Wisconsin, has jumped feet first into her duties as new Outagamie County Home Economics Agent. She loves it. It's just as exciting as she expected it to be, she says, and she's been planning this career since she was in eighth grade.

Judy's family now lives in LaGrange, Ill., but she was graduated from High School in West Allis. Her father is principal and teacher at St. John Lutheran School in LaGrange, her mother was a teacher. Her sister, Carol, has been teaching in Ohio and this year will attend Brown University for a master's degree in mathematics. Her brother, re-begins, she will take at least recently graduated from high three demonstration and dress school, will play football for the two girls to Milwaukee and will University of Illinois. Judy her stay with them at the Youth Dorself says she hasn't completely mitory on the Fair Grounds.

Challenges? The young woman says everything she's done since coming to Appleton has been a challenge. Yet she believes her biggest will be her first home-maker meetings in the fall.

Variety Of Information
A well-rounded background, she believes, is important to her work, and, in addition to her home economics courses, she has and is constantly aware of how studied science, history, English, different and interesting each one economics, literature, psychology, is. She especially enjoys her sociology, physiology and physics. tact with youth, and has been She needs all the knowledge she working closely with Miss Sandy has, and more, she says, as Jones, summer 4-H Club Agent, homemakers daily call to ask The two will appear together at such questions as: "How can I noon Aug. 24 on WFRV-TV.

The Work of the Home Economics Agent is primarily carried out with the homemakers of the county. During the fall she helps set up a program for the clubs and holds workshops with representatives of each. Above, she talks over the schedule for fall with Mrs. Russell Bowers, 3105 N. Ballard Road, treasurer of the Outagamie County Homemakers. Looking on is a visiting neighbor, Cindy Mauthe. Below, Mrs. James Peerenboom, Miss Stellwagen's secretary at the Extension office in the courthouse, confers about plans for the four-day camp session for 4-H members which began today at Mission Lake. (Post-Crescent Photos)

It's Part of the new Outagamie County Home Economics Agent's job to know what's going on in the world of home decoration. When she has time she reads the latest books and periodicals on the subject, and on every other phase of homemaking. Those few free moments that give Judy Stellwagen a chance to read on her own might find her deeply engrossed in a mystery. At right, she putters in the kitchen as she indulges her cooking hobby. Many of Miss Stellwagen's evenings will be taken up with speaking engagements, done on her own time.

Tax Legislation Includes Radio Relay Tower

Construction Would Give Marinette, Door Counties State FM

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — The people of Marinette and Door counties may yet get the state radio broadcasting service which the State Radio Council has wanted to give them for years.

One of the lesser provisions of the "agreed" tax and spending bill produced after long negotiations between Gov. John Reynolds and Republican and Democratic legislative leaders will provide money for the construction of a relay tower that will enable the signals of the state radio network to penetrate the northeastern section of the state.

The appropriation had been repeatedly turned down in earlier legislative maneuvering, in spite of the fact that Speaker Robert Haase of the Assembly is the representative of Marinette County. Gov. Reynolds who spends most of his holidays in Door County at a family cottage, had held out for the appropriation in spite of legislative resistance.

$7,000 Involved
The amount of money involved is $7,000.

Haase supported the governor in the final session of negotiations on the state fiscal impasse, and other members of the conference committee agreed.

Said Robert Knowles, senate Republican leader, as the Democratic governor smilingly acknowledged his little triumph: "That may make up for your veto of the cherry bill."

The reference was to a Reynolds' veto of a measure ardently pushed by Door County fruit growing and processing interests that would have permitted some coloring additives in the processing of canned cherries and apples.

Shut-Off Valves Help to Keep Water Flowing

Small Investment Provides Supply During Emergencies

The automatic dishwasher is working on supper dishes. Mom goes for a glass of water. Junior is lathering up in the shower. Suddenly, the dishwasher stops washing, mom's glass remains empty and junior can't get the soap out of his eye.

In the basement, dad has noticed a leaking faucet in a powder room. To replace the washer, he must stop the water supply to the fixture. He finds it has no shut-off and turns off the main supply valve instead. And there's no water available anywhere in the house.

For a nominal cost when a house is being built, your plumbing contractor can put an end to such scenes.

Continuous Supply
By having plenty of shut-off valves installed, the homeowner is guaranteed a continuous water supply during most emergencies.

For maximum convenience, a valve should be installed on each line to each facility in the house. In most cases, the best place to locate these valves would be directly under the fixtures.

To protect yourself in case of emergencies, it's wise to tag all main valves to the house — water, gas, etc. — and keep a list of these valves in a safe, accessible place. It is also wise to be sure that all responsible family members know about the list, in case of emergencies when the man of the family is not home.

Older Homes Can be Converted to Provide Central Air Conditioning

Central air conditioning is as the addition of two pieces of over is to connect the inside and practical in older homes today as equipment, neither of which re- it is in new ones. quires any valuable floor space. ing.

With the development of special add-on equipment, almost any forced air heating system now can be converted to efficient whole-house cooling in a matter of hours and at considerably less expense than a few years ago.

The cost of air conditioning equipment, in fact, has decreased by 20 per cent in the last five years and is less than a third of what it was in 1947, points out a leading manufacturer.

Homes with forced air furnaces already have a good start on a modern central cooling system. The same blower and ductwork which circulate warm air in winter can be used to circulate cool, filtered, dehumidified air in summer.

All that's required for conversion to a year-around system is

Modest Vacation Cabin Can Be Built at Favorite Lake

MADISON — Here's a plan for a modest vacation cabin you can build next to your favorite lake. The cabin is of frame construction, 24 feet square and easily expandable to three bedrooms. Ted Brevik, building engineer at the University of Wisconsin, says you can construct the exterior walls, then finish the inside or add on at your convenience. The wall between the living area and the bedroom is a movable storage wall. The bedroom partitions can be removed or rearranged with a minimum of refinishing.

Although the working drawings show concrete foundation walls and slab, you may find it more economical to use a wooden floor and masonry, concrete or creosoted pole piers if your site is steeply sloping.

Heating for the cabin depends on the season you intend to use it. The plan is well adapted for hot air, hot water or electrical heat.

This cabin might also be used as low-cost living quarters while a family constructs a permanent home. Later, it may be converted to a garage. If this is your plan, build the exterior walls with a lintel over the future garage door so the wall can be removed without requiring special support.

The plan was designed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. For a copy of detailed drawings send 75 cents to the Department of Agricultural Engineering at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. Ask for Plan No. 5928.

Dining Room Is Definitely Back

Top Architect Urges Inclusion Of 'Eating Space'

The dining room is definitely back. We have the word of a major national magazine, which keeps tabs on such trends.

The dining room no longer will be a mere adjunct of the kitchen, where formal dining is almost impossible. It will be a separate, distinctive room, with the functional requirements associated with a room devoted to the eating of food.

In other words, says one leading architect, the dining room will be large enough for a family and its guests. It will have character and personality in keeping with the family.

By long odds the most desired finish will be the wood-paneled room with the most popular being the attractive and friendly softer tones of the western softwoods.

These woods have the added advantage of serving not only as wonderfully lovely paneling, but a paneled wall can be fitted to form a door to a concealed china cabinet or dish cupboard can be concealed in an attractive wall niche with the paneled doors designed so cleverly they are not visible when they are closed.

Some dining rooms have a full wall of glass exposed to the outdoors, and this arrangement works well with the three wood paneled walls. The real trick is to make this room a warm and friendly place where the family will enjoy gathering and nothing develops this friendly feeling so quickly as carefully selected and finished wood.

Color and Sound

Sitka spruce, one of the world's strongest woods, is widely used for piano sounding boards. Care is taken in selection of the wood for each edge-glued sounding board so that the colorings of the wood matches to make a perfect tone.

House of the Week is a perfect example of the truth of the adage. The main characteristic of today's brand of living is informality, and this handsome one-story house, with a 210-square-foot family room as the hub of daytime activity, follows this function well. Every other aspect of the house, including its counter divides the kitchen and family room; the two rooms combined offer more than 320 square feet for daily activities.

Additional Details

While the accent is on the informal area, architect Vogel also designed the formal living and dining rooms with utmost care.

A box bay window overlooking the front yard, and a grand fireplace on the opposite wall, provide excellent opportunities for interesting furniture groupings. Wrought iron dividers separate the dining room which is almost a perfect square. Folding doors, or a screen, could be put here for further privacy.

The bedroom wing offers excellent use of available space; enough hall area to prevent traffic congestion but nothing wasted. There are a number of nice design features in the sleeping wing. First, notice the natural sound buffers between the wing and the living area, and surrounding the

Take Six-Five Lead

Men Prime Market For Garden Tools

BY GEORGE THIEM
Chicago Daily News Service

People in the garden trade who keep track of such things tell us that only five years ago women were the prime market for gardening equipment and supplies.

But today men have taken a six-to-five lead and are largely responsible for expanding the gardening market to $4 billion annually.

The vast increase of masculine interest in the nation's 38,000,000 gardening households is said to result from these developments.

—More women have entered the labor force; their time off from the office or shop is taken up with household duties.

—More families are paying for homes than ever before in his history; the man of the house has awakened to the simple fact that a neat lawn, some well-placed trees and shrubs and a colorful flower border adds value to the property.

Mild Exercise
—The male population over 65 years has increased. Gardening hours of leisure time invested by is a mild form of exercise and means of maintaining physical and mental health for those past the age for the more strenuous life.

—Rising wants and the cost of living make flower and vegetable growing especially attractive.

There are no sales taxes on home-grown foods and cut flowers for the table.

—Shorter working hours have added to leisure time, and better equipment has sharpened the interest in outdoor cooking and living, a survey by Union Fork & Hoe Co., a leading manufacturer of garden tools, disclosed.

—Wives and husbands usually work together in gardening and frequently both are enthusiastic green thumb addicts. Cutting grass and working with plants offer a change of pace and escape from the kitchen.

Husbands Active
The survey also revealed that 41 per cent of American husbands are taking an active part in shopping for their families and some do most of the buying.

Some 31 per cent more retailers throughout the country last year were selling garden tools and supplies than during the previous 12 months.

Maintaining a lawn leads in the hours of leisure time invested by the amateur gardener but grows means of maintaining physical and mental health for those past the age for the more strenuous life.

Nearly seven out of eight gardeners in the survey said they grew some flowers and about half as many were growing vegetables.

Paine Art Center Announces Plans For Top Shows

Director Gregg Gathering First American Exhibit of Daubigny

OSHKOSH — The Paine Art Center will be the site of two art shows of wide interest.

On Aug. 4, the Center will display works of the students in its Monday night art classes taught by Mrs. Marjorie Bergstrom Moore. There will be a selection of more than 50 watercolors, oil paintings and drawings. The exhibit will end Aug. 23.

The Sept. 1 through 22 exhibit will be a state-wide triumph when the Center displays the John J. Reiss collection of modern prints. The Milwaukee collection contains graphics by such giants as Arp, Chagall, Klee, Manessier, Miro, Picasso, Rouault and Sinner.

A collection of world graphics by William Stone of Kalamazoo, Mich., will be borrowed for the Nov. 3 through 28 exhibit. This show will illustrate commercial art at its best from Europe, Japan and America.

Master Prints

The University of Wisconsin department of art history's collection of "old master" prints will be on display Dec. 1 through Jan. 9.

Original etchings, engravings taken him a full year before the show is organized and the catalog is written. The major loan such giants as Callot, Durer, Goya, Hogarth, Piranesi, Rembrandt, Schongauer, Toulouse-Lautrec and Whistler are included in the collection.

An exhibit of fabrics, ceramics, jewelry, mosaics, enamels, wood and leather goods produced by Wisconsin craftsmen and on tour Oct. 31. It contains more than 200 handmade coffee pots, urns, sugar bowls, cream jugs, trays, and related sideboard silver. The Paine from Jan. 12 through Feb. 23.

Only in Oshkosh

Gregg estimates it will have 9. The Paine exhibit will be the first of this collection in Wisconsin and several pieces including an 18th Century square coffee pot will be on exhibit for the first time anywhere.

Rare Pieces

To protect this valuable collection, the Paine has designed and constructed 25 new glass cases for its display.

While these two shows serve as evening tours of the center can be arranged through Gregg's office, fall, winter and spring schedule.

Vermont Museum Has Gallery of Game Art

SHELBURNE, Vt. — "The Museum brought to the grounds piece by piece for reassembly to the fabulous Barber, Moeller and Webb collections of fowl decoys.

The 33rd building completed at the Sheburne Museum is the Beach Gallery containing the collection of the late Mr. and Mrs. William N. Beach. It is the fourth structure to be turned over to the exhibition of art.

Big Game

The emphasis in the Beach Gallery is on North American big game and the new structure complements the Beach Hunting Lodge, completed last year, where the Beach hunting trophies are displayed.

The game pictures are oils by the late outdoor painter, Carl Rangius. There are 60 of his wildlife studies. In addition the gallery holds landscapes of Canada and Alaska by outstanding artists including the Currier and Ives painter A. F. Tait, western artist Frederic Remington, Herbert Dunton and Belmore Browne and the Alaskan painter Sydney Laurance.

History and drama are combined in two large paintings from this exhibit. "Farthest North" by Albert Operti hung for many years.

The Attic Theater's "On-Stage" art show during the run of the mystery drama "Kind Lady" which ends tonight at the Music-Drama Center is made up of works by Dwayne Jurgensen of the production crew. The "Ming" horse, the welded sculpture, the "Whistler" seascape and the two "primitives" are props for the drama. There also is an art show hung in the lobby featuring works by Jurgensen, Dorothy Rappel, Jack Vlossak, Gary Fusfeld and James Auer. (Post-Crescent Photo by Ralph Acker)

Art Shows

His works have appeared in the Attic Theater production of "Kind Lady" to 1962 graduate of Appleton High School and a charter member of the Attic Theater, and the second president of the Appleton Junior College of Arts.

For all of his present interest in art, Dwayne didn't become a professional artist until he was a freshman at AHS where he came under the influence of Michael Brandt, now of the Oshkosh State College faculty, and the current AHS art director Harold Carlson.

He feels the most important pursuit of a young artist is the practice of experimentation to gain a combination of freedom and economy of line in many mediums.

Two Paths

Jurgensen came to the Attic Theater production crew by two paths. He played a major role in his senior class play, "Mrs. McMurphy," at AHS, but he also produced hand props for the show. As well, at the Attic he played parts in "Peer Gynt" and "The Forest." But he's had most of his activity on the production crew.

Working with Phil Dixon, the production manager, and artist Gary Fusfeld, Jurgensen has had a hand in designing sets and coordinating color in a number of shows.

Until "Kind Lady," Jurgensen's main problem had been the design of the floor of the stage. It is a challenging problem, Jurgensen says. The floor of "Once Upon a Time" featured a like example of her exquisite burst of color in a field of white. "Born Yesterday" featured a black and white tile effect and "Kind Lady" has a floor that

Bergstrom Center Displays Show Of Graphics by Hogarth, Daumier

NEENAH — The graphic show Paul Swenson of the library print ing "The Rake's Progress" by that opened Wednesday at the department. Bergstrom Art Center should be of as much interest to the student of history as the serious student of the arts and the casual gallery-goer. Since it features two of the keenest observers ever to touch acid to metal, William Hogarth and Honore Daumier.

What the early Dutch masters did to bring the everyday living of their time and place, Hogarth did for 18th Century England and Daumier for 19th Century France. In addition to being superb craftsmen and artists, these two were sharp journalists and reformers. Hogarth especially considered himself as an "author" as well as an artist. He constructed series of engravings to tell a story and so well and graphically were the stories told that they became the bases of dramas. One, "The Rake's Progress," is a part of the Metropolitan Opera Co's repertoire.

Daumier's craft was too sharp for the reigning powers of mid-19th Century France and he spent time in prison trying to curb his sense of outraged indignation. Happily, the cure did not take. The Bergstrom show contains 55 engravings and lithographs borrowed from the Boston Public Library and the five-piece Daumier series "Les Gens de Justice" loaned to the center by Atty. and Mrs. H. P. Hoeft of Appleton. All are original works.

The Boston Library loan was arranged when Sinclair Hitchings, keeper of prints at the library, came to Bergstrom to view the show of Edmund Blampied works of which Hitchings is a world recognized expert. The collection was selected by Hitchings and

Fairgrounds Care Endless Project

$20,000 Spent to Get Ready for Winnebago Fair Aug. 27-30

OSHKOSH — When the Winnebago County Fair opens for its 3-day run Aug. 27-30, almost $20,000 will have been spent on general maintenance and capital improvements on the buildings and grounds.

Upkeep of the buildings and grounds is a continuous project and, since the close of last year's fair, almost $15,000 has been spent in general maintenance. Before this fair opens, more than $5,000 will have been spent on capital improvements.

Robert Misky, fair manager, said none of this money comes from tax funds. The Winnebago County Fair, which draws upwards of 60,000 people, pays its own way from gate receipts.

Portable Stage

One of the major improvements for this year will be a new 40 by 50-foot portable stage in front of the grandstand. This is expected to cost about $5,000. Misky said final details on the new stage will be worked out at a meeting this week.

Annual inspection of the grandstand will be made before start of the fair to check for any broken seats, floorboards or other timbers that may need replacing. New kitchen facilities, such as sinks and sideboards, were installed under the grandstand.

The harness racing track was graded, dragged and graded again. The entire fence around the race track, including rails and posts, was inspected and replaced where necessary.

Decoration of booths will start this week.

Yet to come is the retarring of four acres of roofs of fairground buildings.

The harness racing feature marks the return of the sport to the Winnebago County Fair after a number of years. Misky said the decision on whether the sport will be continued as a regular fair feature will be determined this year.

Paper Firm Notes Higher Earnings, Sales in 1963

Higher sales, paper shipments and earnings for the first six months of 1963 compared with 1962 were reported by Nekoosa-Edwards Paper Co., Port Edwards.

In the second quarter report, chairman John E. Alexander and president Samuel A. Casey said that an improvement in the company's position is being accomplished by a stepped-up sales effort and an intensive cost control and reduction program.

Earnings are up considerably for the paper company. $1,715,730 for the first six months of 1963 compared to $1,074,633 for the same period in 1962 on first half sales of $26.9 million compared to $26.4 for that period last year. Per share earnings were 89 cents compared to 55 cents a year ago. Shipments for the six-month period totaled 87,012 tons, up about 2% over the 85,002 tons shipped during the same period a year ago.

Aluminum Company Reports Increase in Net Sales

Net sales of Mirro Aluminum Company, Manitowoc, for the first six months of 1963 showed a four per cent increase over the first half of 1962, according to a company statement.

Net sales for the first six months were $20,170,000 as compared to the previous year's $19,330,000 figure. Net income was $1,042,000, an increase of 10 per cent over the first half of 1962. Net income per share was 99 cents compared to 90 cents per share for the first six months of 1962.

Poygan 4-H Members To Plan Annual Fair

OSHKOSH — The Poygan Grotto 4-H Club will meet at the Enterprise School at 8 p.m. Wednesday to make final plans for the annual Poygan Community Fair to be held next Sunday at the Poygan Community Clubhouse.

The Beaver Valley 4-H Club will meet at 8 p.m. Monday at the Clayton School.

The Star Dust 4-H Club judging contest will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday at the R. J. Vanciel home.

The 75-Year-Old Oshkosh City Hall probably will be torn down this winter after city offices move to the new municipal building in October. The building was constructed in 1888 at a cost of about $40,000. The site probably will be used as a parking lot and is being considered as the site of the new central fire station. (Post-Crescent Photo)

The Oshkosh Planning Commission is considering a proposal to sell the City Hall Annex, which was built in 1900 for use as the county jail and sheriff's house. City offices housed in the annex will be moved to the new municipal building in October along with city hall offices. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Unit Studying Home for Aged In Oshkosh Visits State Sites

Rock, Walworth Institutions Are Viewed for Size, Cost to County

OSHKOSH — County Institutions Committee members and Pleasant Acres officials faced with either replacing Pleasant Acres Home or having expensive remodeling work done, visited two new homes for the aged in southern Wisconsin and admitted they were impressed with what they saw.

Mrs. Virginia Nolan, chairman of the committee, committee members Herman Brandt and James Coughlin, Pleasant Acres Superintendent William Vogel and assistant Superintendent Sherman Anderson inspected the Walworth County Home at Elkhorn, which has been in use for about a year, and the Rock County Home at Janesville which is scheduled for occupancy this fall.

Mrs. Nolan said it was "quite a revelation" to inspect the two institutions and learn of their background and development. It was amazing, she said, to see Walworth County, with half the population of Winnebago County, building a home and a new courthouse at the same time.

Oshkosh City Hall Has New Address

OSHKOSH — City hall has a new address. In anticipation of the move to the new building on Church Avenue, the city has rented a post office box. All mail for the city hall should now be addressed to Post Office Box 1130, 54902.

Man Sues City For $7,500

Claims for $7,500 in damages for injuries he received when his car hit a manhole in the City of Appleton have been filed against the city by Edward Giles, 613 S. Lee St.

According to Giles' complaint, he was thrown against the dashboard of his car Aug. 22, 1961, when his car struck a manhole which protruded approximately five inches above the surface on N. Meade Street.

Giles received injuries to his head, body, arms and legs and has been suffering dizzy spells since the incident.

Mrs. Nolan said both Rock and Walworth County officials indicated their experiences were the same as here—the percentage of maximum care residents was increasing in proportion to the others.

Neenah Players Next Play Has 'Strong' Cast

Director Calls 'Miracle Worker' 'Inspiring Story'

NEENAH — The true story of Helen Keller presents a cast of strong characters and situations that could hardly be improved upon by invention.

This was the view of Richard Henkel, director of the Riverside Players' production of "The Miracle Worker" as he and his cast prepare it for performances at the Riverside Pavilion at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Henkel added that he felt author William Gibson presented "the inspiring story as realistically as possible. Often it is dramatic, but it is never morbid. It is filled with changing moods of lively action and humor."

Grew Up Wild

For his story, Gibson chose to tell of Helen Keller's early years. Shortly before her second birthday, she was struck by a brain fever which destroyed her speech, sight and hearing.

Cut off entirely from the world, as Miss Keller wrote later, she grew up "wild and unruly, kicking and scratching" to achieve her few simple pleasures.

Finding no help in medicine, her parents finally wrote Boston for help. This was that the half-blind but determined Irish girl Annie Sullivan came from Boston to Alabama to be tutor and companion to Helen.

The balance of the play's story is concerned with the next few months in which Annie works day and night, laboring physically and mentally, to bring the rebellious Helen out of her darkness and into an awareness and appreciation of the world around her.

Through Touch

This she accomplishes through the sense of touch, spelling words repeatedly by sign language into the girl's palm, until, finally, in a last triumphant scene at the water pump, she makes contact with Helen's brain.

Annie Sullivan remained at Helen Keller's side for 50 years, guiding her from this point, through learning the Braille system, to typewriting and eventually learning to speak.

Henkel was director of last year's Riverside Players' presentation of "The Dairy of Anne Frank."

2 Landmarks Fated To be Abandoned

County Highway Signs Reported Destroyed

County highway signs have been destroyed and set on fire, Outagamie County Highway Commissioner Clarence Brownson reported to the sheriff's department Thursday.

Brownson said five signs in the Town of Greenville were put on top of flare pots and burned in the past week. He said a large tank-type flare was taken from a construction site and placed in the middle of the road forcing traffic to go around it and into a ditch.

Nekoosa-Edwards Declares Dividend

A quarterly dividend of 20 cents per share, payable Sept. 4, 1963, on common stock of Nekoosa-Edwards Paper Company to shareholders of record at the close of business Aug. 14, 1963, was voted by the board of directors of that company on Friday, July 19, 1963.

Old Cars Pause During Race From Green Bay

Drivers in Goggles, Dusters Stop for Picnic at Oshkosh Brewery Grounds

OSHKOSH — Dusters and goggles were the proper attire Saturday as you really were not in the style unless you were behind the wheel of a 1915 Model "T" or a 1916 Overland or even a 1931 Rolls Royce.

The setting was the re-creation of the Green Bay to Madison road race by the Wisconsin Region of the Horseless Carriage Club of America.

Antique car enthusiasts from the entire Fox River Valley, driving vehicles ranging from a 1911 Model "T" to a 1941 Pontiac convertible, started from Green Bay at 9 a.m. Saturday, duplicating the route of the 1906 race.

Drivers and vehicles rested overnight at Green Lake and were then continuing on today to Madison, with a banquet concluding the event.

No such event, though, is complete without roadside stop for a picnic lunch. This was provided by Dave Uihlein of the Oshkosh Brewery and Oshkosh Sausage Co. on the brewery grounds.

While the participants gathered for a frat fry and to make adjustments to their horseless carriages where necessary, Oshkosh small fry, and adults, gathered to admire the cars, most of which were restored to showroom condition.

Participating in the event were Mr. and Mrs. John Hill, Rosen-

19th Century City Hall, Annex At Oshkosh to be Razed in Favor Of Parking Lot or Fire Station

OSHKOSH — Two Oshkosh landmarks have apparently about reached the end of their usefulness. The 75-year old city hall building and 63-year old city hall annex will be abandoned this fall when city offices are moved to the new municipal building sometime in October.

The common council has indicated it probably will tear down the city hall and use the land for parking or possibly as a site of a new central fire station. The city planning commission has a council proposal to advertise bids for sale of the annex.

The annex, originally built as the Winnebago County Jail and sheriff's home, was sold to the city after the new courthouse was built.

City offices, such as the city health department and welfare department, were moved into the annex after it was remodeled. The driver's license examiner division of the motor vehicle department also is located in the annex.

Times have changed since the two red-brick edifices were built—the city hall in 1887-88 and the annex in 1899-1900. Building costs have changed even more. The two structures were built for less than it would cost to draw the plans for similar buildings today.

Total Cost

As nearly as can be determined from the bond issue, the city hall and land cost about $40,000 while the annex was built by the county for somewhat less than $25,000, including purchase of the land.

The decision to build the City hall was made in 1886 after much agitation and opposition. Plans were finally approved and the contract awarded March 2, 1887, to J. N. Ruby who also happened to be chief of police.

City Moved In

Cornerstone laying took place May 30 that year. City officials moved in exactly one year later.

An interesting sidelight was that after the building was completed, the various city officials had to be ordered to move their offices into the new city hall. Only the mayor and clerk were occupying the building.

Since that time various remodeling projects have taken place in an attempt to keep up with city needs.

Different Start

The annex had quite a different start in life, being designed as the county jail and sheriff's residence. Construction of the building was authorized at the March, 1899 session of the county board at a cost "not to exceed $25,000."

The lot on Ceape Avenue was purchased for $2,800 and the contract was awarded to Champion Iron Co., Kenton, Ohio, for $21,932 to build the jail with work starting Aug. 15, 1899.

The building was completed on Nov. 28, 1900. It was noted the contractor was assessed $514 for damages for not completing work within the specified time of the contract.

Little Optimistic

In their report to the county board, the public buildings committee submitted "we hope it (the building) will endure until the higher civilization arrives, when jails shall be no more, and crime shall be unknown."

The committee apparently was a little optimistic as more facilities were provided when the new courthouse was built and those are now overtaxed.

Took Out Cells

The city purchased the jail building after the courthouse was built and, after deciding not to move the police department into the annex, took out the cells.

Since 1942, when the last of the city health offices moved to the annex, use of the building has changed little.

The move to the new municipal building in October will unite, for the first time in almost 30 years, all of the offices under one roof.

Less Sensational Future Seen for Un-American Activities Committee

BY WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Born in legislative activities to put into bill form the fruits of past investigations, the House Committee on Un-American Activities may be due for a respite from the storms that have marked much of its 25-year history. That's the indication with Rep. Edwin E. Willis, a quiet Louisiana Democrat, at the helm. For a while, Willis says, the committee will concentrate on

But he hastens to add the committee is not going to ease the pressure of its investigations on the Communist apparatus in the United States. "There will be no change in policy or scope or direction," says Willis, who took over as chairman after the death May 31 of Rep. Francis E. Walter, D-Pa. Walter had headed the committee since 1955, the year Willis became a member. Underscoring Willis' words, the committee pressed its investigation into illegal travel to Cuba by U.S. citizens with a series of hearings in Los Angeles—and a promise of more to come. Little Resemblance But the Los Angeles hearings bear little resemblance to the sensational seasons of the latter 1940s and early 1950s—the days of committee probes of communism on the campus and in the movies, of spies in the government, of Whitaker Chambers and Alger Hiss. The days of drama and sensation apparently are gone. Days like the one in December 1948 when Rep. Richard M. Nixon of California was whisked off a ship in the Caribbean for a rush trip back to Washington on committee business. The business turned out to be the Hiss case. On Dec. 6, Nixon read to newsmen the testimony of admitted ex-Communist Whitaker Chambers against a former state department official, Alger Hiss. Chambers swore that Hiss gave him secret government papers which were relayed to a Soviet staff have made clear all too many times that their primary purpose is exposure, rather than the gathering of evidence for legislation." Roosevelt said Willis points out that the committee not only is empowered by the House rules to conduct investigations—it is ordered to do so. Willis, 58, is the ninth man to head a committee on subversion and un-American activities since the House started looking into those fields in 1930. That year, a special committee applicants for federal jobs be under Rep. Hamilton Fish R-N.Y., checked against committee files, and this is still being done. Representatives of federal agencies that 42 laws have been passed by the Congress on the basis of committee recommendations. Not all of them were sent to the floor by the committee itself. All told, the committee has a staff of 49. As for statistics on what they do, committee officials say, 3,800 inquiries about subversion and communism came in from members of Congress last year. In 25 years, the committee has published 497 volumes of hearings and reports. They fill 11 feet of bookshelf space, and more than 7 million copies have been distributed.

Fiscal Fight in Madison Affects Welfare of Veterans at King Home

If Legislators Fail to Pass Budget, Retrenchment Will be Mandatory

BY DICK MCDANIEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

KING — The 240 employees at the Grand Army Home for Veterans here may be the first to feel the financial squeeze brought about by the tax deadlock in Madison. Plans are being made to cut salaries unless the state's fiscal problem is settled before Aug. 15.

John S. Drayna, commandant, said the attorney general has ruled salaries can be reduced to the starting levels in emergency cases. This would reduce the operating expenses of the home by 8 1/2 per cent. The state agencies have been warned to cut their costs by 22 per cent if a budget is not adopted.

Drayna said another method of lowering the costs will be the refusal of applications for membership at the home, which will go into effect Aug. 1. Although most of the applicants are emergency cases, they will be refused admission.

Lose 100
By refusing to take new members, the home could possibly lose about 100 members during the following year. The average is about 60 deaths per year and 40 voluntary discharges.

Drayna said he expects the voluntary discharges of members who work during the summer or autumn to fall off because the veterans and their widows and mothers realize they will not be accepted until the crisis is resolved.

By denying new memberships, the home can reduce its membership to a point where some of the employees could be laid off to meet the 2 per cent cut in operating costs.

Delay Layoff
Drayna, however, indicated there would be no layoffs for some time as members are scattered in many buildings and each employee is assigned to buildings and duties in specific areas.

For example, if 20 or so members are lost in the infirmary it may be possible to relieve one nurse's aide. But it is more likely that the 20 members leaving would be residing in almost 20 different buildings.

Immediate steps to curb spending include delaying the purchase of items requested in the 1963-64 budget. The fiscal year started July 1 and many of the items requested were not ordered pending the outcome of the tax battle.

Sole Supporter
Drayna said the state is the sole supporter of the veterans at the home. The home has a $1,100,000 budget including the capital outlays for the families and hamper recruitment new year which started July 1 was about $90,000 more than the preceding budget.

Seven new positions were to be filled at the start of the new year, but these too have been delayed about by the tax deadlock in Madison. Drayna said, however, the home will replace people in critical positions if vacancies are created.

Drayna said all employees are considered essential and "an immediate reduction in personnel does not seem possible."

Member Income
Members at the home have an income of about $300,000 which is accepted by the state and returned to the home along with the balance of its budget. This revenue from the members represents about 30 per cent of its operating cost.

Drayna said some people have the home is supported by federal funds. However, the only federal funds used at the home, is for new building construction. Some of the members receive federal pensions but this is personal revenue.

At present there are 462 members at the home. There is no waiting list for membership and on a clothing allowance of $23.29 for men and $15.85 for women. Comfort items for members, including tobacco, soap, toothpaste, stationery, etc., averaged $4.93 per member.

Increase Sought
The new budget requested an increase to put the members on par with public welfare assistance, which would increase the comfort items to $56 per year and clothing for bed patients to $36 per year and in $72 per year for ambulatory members.

About two weeks ago when the compromise tax bill was introduced, the clothing and comfort items were reduced to the original status.

Drayna said the average cost for keeping a member has not increased in ratio with other increases during the last 10 years. During the 1952-53 year, members were supported on $18.30 per month. During the year ending June 30 the cost was $25.50 per member.

Salary Art
The commandant maintained a salary cut for employees may cause a loss of key personnel.

Drayna said the state is the sole supporter of the veterans at the home. The home has a $1,100,000 budget including the capital outlays for the families and hamper recruitment

Paper Institute Readies Plans for Chemical Meeting

School's Vast Research Provides Material for Two Week Study

A conference at the Institute of Paper Chemistry, Appleton, will provide opportunity for one technical seminar were conducted at the Institute for personnel industry which it serves, in terms of current service given and opportunities and challenges for expanded services. This will be the conference on chemicals and paper starting Monday and continuing through Aug. 8.

For two weeks the Institute staff will lay out before research representatives of the chemical industry the entire arc of paper production phenomena wherein chemicals currently play a part or where new and expanded parts can be played.

The Institute has over 30 years of research concentrated in the areas of pulp and paper science. Its background includes the research in processes for paper production, a large amount of instrumentation, studies, in additives, coatings, fillers, sizings, theory of the structure of paper, paper optical properties, saturation, impregnations, containers and packaging, combinations of paper with other materials, specialty treatments, raw materials, and biological implications in forestry, utilization for by-products, and stream quality.

A need for such a conference was realized by the Institute through the amount of consultation, research, and discussion required.

Drayna said he too will be affected by the salary decrease if it is necessary. This is the first time in the history of the home there has been no authority for merit increases for employees. The merit increases are normally granted on conference is 24 participants. Dr. George Sears of the Institute staff received an increase this year.

Oshkosh Property Valuation Rises

OSHKOSH — Oshkosh's 1963 assessed valuation was set at $113,212,000 for real and personal property by City Assessor George W. Goltz.

This is an increase of $4,243,225 over the 1962 assessment, or 3.9 per cent. The 1963 real estate assessment is $94,847,725 and the personal property assessment is $18,364,275. The assessment rate for Oshkosh is about 55 per cent of real value.

Promote Oshkosh Man To Sergeant in Marine Reserve Unit

OSHKOSH — Harry D. Reese, 121 Bay St., Oshkosh, recently was promoted to sergeant in the Marine reserves. It was announced by Capt. G. P. Miley, commanding officer of the 95th Rifle Co., United States Marine Corps Reserve, Oshkosh.

Sgt. Reese currently is assigned duties as the platoon sergeant of the First Rifle Platoon.

Oshkosh Youth Group To Act as Tour Guides

OSHKOSH — Members of the Oshkosh Youth Council will serve as guides for the open house at the new municipal building, City Manager Ray Harbaugh announced. No date for the open house has yet been set. City offices are slated to move to the new location in October.

Game Violations
Fish and wild game, long devoured and forgotten, are still the subjects of warrants taken out against their captors by conservation officials for game violations.

Several years ago a warrant was taken out for an Appleton woman charging her with shoplifting and cashing a worthless warrant issued in 1946 and never check. The woman died before served was Edward (alias "Ed") Spanner, wanted in connection with the slaying of William Van Camp on Mother's Day in 1940 in the Town of Freedom killed also.

Presumably, if the widow remarries, his bride will inherit the married name, and, possibly, the two warrants charging her name sake with the violations.

Court Files Contain Over 500 'Crimes' Still Unsolved

Some Cases Date Back to 1940, Most Are for Minor Offenses

BY RAY PY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

More than 500 persons have avoided being charged with crimes they allegedly committed in Outagamie County and, as far as police authorities know, are still at large somewhere.

Warrants charging former county residents with crimes ranging from allowing a dog to run at large, to keeping a horse within the city limits, all the way up to and including murder, still are on file in the Outagamie County Court, Branch 2.

The "crimes" go as far back as 1939 when a former city resident was charged with hitting a light pole and mail box, then leaving the scene of the accident. The warrant was taken out by former long-time police chief, the late George Pium.

The warrants, which occupy almost an entire drawer in the filing office of the court, are listed alphabetically and can only be disposed of by the apprehension of the subject named in the warrant, or by the dismissal of the charge through a court order.

Many Minor

Although many of the charges are minor, the statute of limitations does not affect them and it is quite possible that the next door neighbor of one complainant could still be made to answer to a charge that he "participated in loud noises" back in 1943.

The issuing of a warrant is a step in prosecution of the case and can be done any time. The statutes of limitations affect those crimes for which no prosecution has been started over a certain period of time.

Approximately 60 per cent of the 500 violations are for desertion of a city ordinance by keeping a horse within the city limits.

A 1950 case in which an Apple-

Double Murder

The miscellaneous group of 10 per cent includes such crimes as embezzlement from a local theater of over $4,000, burglary, several complaints of disorderly conduct (one of breaking a window in 1936) and countless traffic violations (some as old as 1940).

Named in a yellowed murder warrant issued in 1946 and never check. The woman died before served was Edward (alias "Ed") Spanner, wanted in connection with the slaying of William Van Camp on Mother's Day in 1940 in the Town of Freedom killed also.

Failures
The tests were failed for the following reasons: vision, 47, sign and written, 433, driving, 559.

Of the 3,271 tests, 662 persons were issued school permits and 1,346 regular permits to learn to drive for a county total of 2,008 permits for persons to learn how to drive.

Of the remaining license issues, 102 were for reinstatement of a revoked license, 91 chauffeurs licenses and 29 school bus drivers. The remaining issuance of license were for persons moving into the state or persons required to take an examination before renewal.

MVD officials estimated that approximately 1,200 new drivers were added to the highways in Winnebago County since Jan. 1.

A breakdown by cities shows the following:

Neenah — A total of 688 driving tests were given of which 99 were failed. Eight were for vision failures. A total of 65 school permits were issued, 335 regular permits for a total of 420 persons learning to drive. There were 23 reinstatements, 20 chauffeurs and 3 school bus drivers license issued for approximately 250 new drivers. There were 111 vehicle failures.

'Go-Getter' Tom Smith's Leadership Wins Appointment to Boys Nation

BY DEE HERMAN

FREEDOM—Double honors this year go to Tom Smith, a Freedom High School senior, who was a delegate to Badger Boys State and was subsequently chosen as one of two boys from Wisconsin to attend Boys Nation at Washington, D. C., July 19 through 26.

"Don't be surprised if I run for governor," Tom told his parents when he was selected to attend Badger Boys Convention. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Smith, Route 1, Seymour.

Tom was named to attend Boys Nation while at Ripon as a delegate to Badger State. When asked how he was chosen Tom said, "You are being watched all week by a counsel of men to see how well you cooperate with others."

One day, he remembers, he was called before a board and interviewed. At the time he didn't know what "they" were looking for.

Stayed in Maryland

At Boys Nation Tom stayed with boys from all over the United States at the University of Maryland. Brent Poppenhagen from Sheboygan Falls is the other youth chosen to represent Wisconsin at the nation's capital.

Boys Nation is sponsored annually by the American Legion or through a private sponsor. Tom was sponsored at Badger Boys State by the Freedom VFW.

While at Ripon State College, Tom ran on the Federalist Party and was appointed city policeman in the city of "Rennebohm." In the state elections he was elected state assemblyman. His county "Cameron" won first place in intermural football.

Tom sums up his experiences at the state convention as, "I learned to get along with others and acquired many new friendships."

Real Go-Getter

Tom's a real go-getter, his teachers say. His many activities prove it. In the past he has been freshman class president. He designed this year's junior prom with the theme "Star Dust", thus earning himself the chairmanship of the prom. He is the school photographer.

In the past he has been secretary of the F.F.A. and helped organize the Letterman's Club. He is also active in forensics.

Tom loves sports and has participated in football and track since his freshman year. This past spring he took up golf.

Among his favorite pastimes are leathercraft and stamp collecting. Tom has a year-round job helping his father on their 120-acre farm.

In looking into the future, Tom says that upon graduation he would like to enter Stevens Point College and major in engineering or teaching. No matter what Tom does with his future you can be sure he will be a leader.

Leatherwork and stamp collecting are the principal hobbies of Tom Smith, Freedom, who last week attended Boys Nation at Washington, D. C. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Behind the Cover

Miss Mary Ellen Thoma, the leading lady of the Oshkosh Junior Theatre production of "Annie Get Your Gun," will be a senior at Oshkosh State College this fall, majoring in secondary education.

Although Miss Thoma has danced for 13 years—including roles in the Oshkosh High School productions of "Oklahoma!" and "The King and I"—this is her first year in Junior Theatre.

While at OSC she has been active with the "Stage Door" Club.

Miss Thoma, who lives at 2645 W. Fourth Street, Oshkosh, was Winnebago County dairy queen in 1957, and was a contestant in the 1962 Miss Oshkosh contest. She also holds the title of "America's Paper Doll."

19th. Century Print Shop Dedicated By Banta Foundation at Stonefield

CASSVILLE—History was brought dramatically to life here Saturday, July 20, as the Banta Company Foundation presented a 19th Century print shop and replica pioneer church to the State Historical Society.

The newspaper office and church edifice are located at Stonefield, the village of the 1809's in Nelson Dewey State Park.

Stonefield, a rural trading center similar to thousands of tiny communities in the midwest in the late 19th century, is an outgrowth of the State Farm and Craft Museum established at Nelson Dewey State Park about 10 years ago.

The office of the Stonefield Gazette, donated by the Banta Company Foundation, is representative of pioneer newspaper establishments in Wisconsin. The replica plant is equipped with a Washington hand press and a foot-powered platen job press which can print a 10 x 15 auction bill.

The Gazette takes its name from the Belmont Gazette, the state's oldest weekly, founded in 1836.

The church, a short distance from Stonefield's village square, was constructed by the Banta Foundation as an exact replica of the United Presbyterian church of Dover and Yorkville, a tiny pioneer house of worship built by Scotch Presbyterians in Kenosha County in 1847.

Closed in 1900, the original church was maintained by descendants of the founders until early this year, when the furnishings were moved to the replica structure at Stonefield. The wallpaper of the original building has been duplicated for the Stonefield edifice, and the church organ is now being rebuilt.

Stonefield will always be about 75 years old, according to the Historical Society, and it is intended to grow with the times. Visitors to Stonefield may also visit the Nelson Dewey homestead, and tour the nearby State Farm and Craft Museum.

Visitors are met at the entrance to the village by a horsedrawn bus. They then ride through a covered bridge onto the streets of Stonefield, where they may walk in and out of the shops and stores, seeing and touching the objects still well remembered by many of them.

When they are ready, they can climb back into the horse-drawn bus and ride back into the world of today.

Presented to Stonefield village by the Banta Company Foundation was this tiny pioneer church, an exact replica of the United Presbyterian Church of Dover and Yorkville. The original church was built in Racine County in 1847. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Miss Gloria Link Has Leading Role In O'Neill Play

BY JAMES AUER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

BARABOO—Wisconsin theatrical history will be made here Aug. 2 as the Green Ram theatre presents the state premiere of Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer prize-winning drama, "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

With Gloria Link, director of drama at Oshkosh State College, in the leading role, O'Neill's monumental portrait of an anguished family will be offered nightly, through Aug. 6, at 8 p.m.

The production is in many ways the high point of the unique summer theater's seven-year history.

On Family Farm

Founded by Mrs. Claire Ellen Kentzler, a producer for the State Radio Network, the Green Ram is located on the Kentzler family farm, just off U.S. 12, between Baraboo and Lake Delton.

Unlike many summer theaters, it maintains a resident company of actors and technicians, whose number is augmented by visiting players such as Norman Michie, a former Menasha resident now employed by the State Stations.

Peter Bramelow, an English actor now headquartered in San Francisco, will join the company for "Long Day's Journey."

"We've been feeding 26 lately," Mrs. Kentzler told a visitor last week. This total includes, not only actors and crew members, but the actors' children and assorted cats and dogs.

The resident company and visiting stars occupy

Conducting an out-of-doors rehearsal for the Irish comedy "The Far-Off Hills" is Miss Gloria Link, director of drama at Oshkosh State College. permanent quarters on the Green Ram farm. There is a house trailer, with yard, set up for director Robert Macaulay, his wife, their two children, Collie and cat.

There is also a substantial farmhouse, with an enclosed patio at the rear, for meals and rehearsals. A former chicken coop has been converted into a business and publicity office.

Two small A-frame houses, built by actors and crew, offer shelter for three distaff members of the company. Unmarried actors and technicians occupy a large barracks structure that is strictly segregated—by gender.

Mrs. Kentzler, whose husband is manager of the Union Theatre on the U.W. campus, is proud of the fact that all of the painting and construction work—with the exception of the theater and basic house—was done by herself and the Green Ram company.

Weekly Openings

Despite its air of ease and open-air conviviality, the Green Ram organization is a tightly-lit production company, opening a new show every Friday night during the nine-week summer season.

Rehearsals begin on Saturday morning for the show that will open the following Friday night. Actors work from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon, and from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Kitchen and laundry chores are assigned to all members of the company, and a market garden is maintained to provide the table with vegetables.

The patio, in which rehearsals take place, has the same dimensions as the stage, onto which the production moves the day before the scheduled opening.

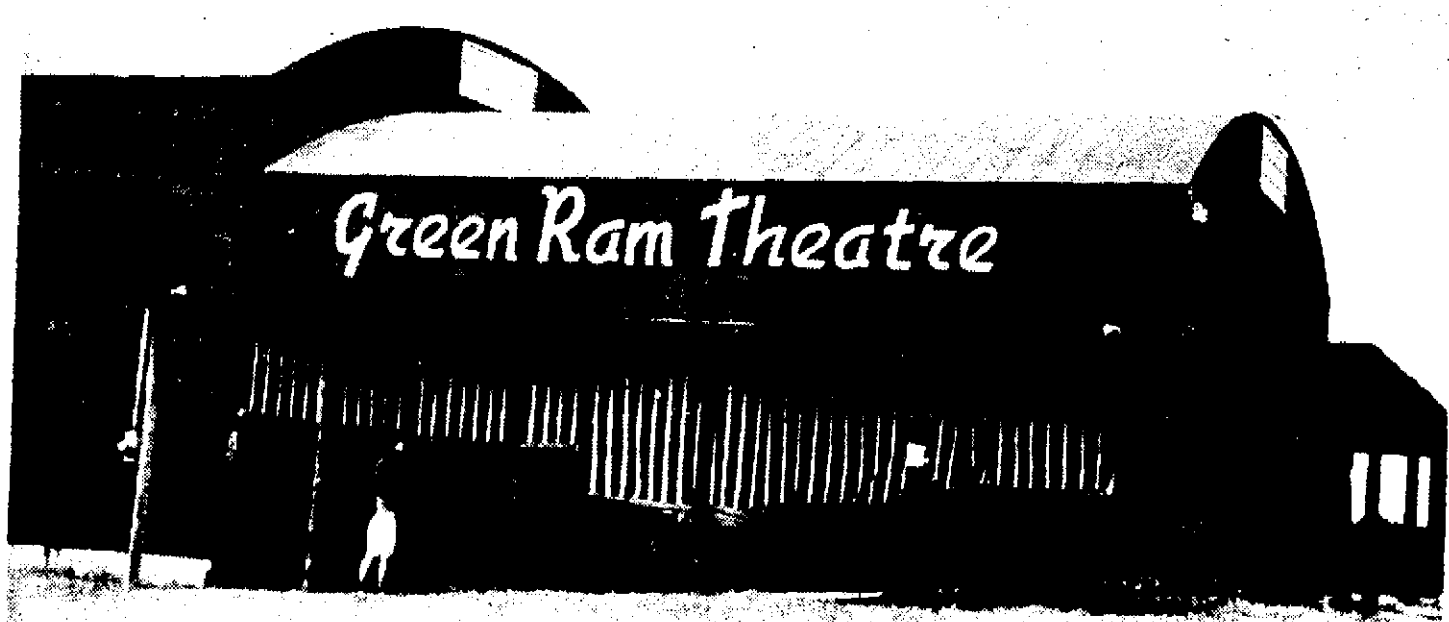

All Green Ram productions are offered proscenium-style in an auditorium which seats 200 persons. The green-painted theater has a permanent roof and roll-up canvas walls, which afford natural ventilation.

Miss Link, who directed two shows this year in addition to her acting chores, has been affiliated with the Green Ram for the past seven years. To date, she has directed 39 plays for the group.

A comfortable chair and typewriter stand serve as outdoor "office" for Miss Lois Dubin, seated, publicity director, and Mrs. Claire Ellen Kentzler, owner-manager of the Green Ram Theatre. Mrs. Kentzler is also a producer for the State Radio Network.

All of the buildings on the Green Ram property, with the exception of the theater building and farmhouse, were built by members of the company. These A-frame houses are residences of the permanent company.

VOCAL—JOAN SUTHERLAND

Command Performance: Joan Sutherland, soprano, with London Symphony and Chorus, Richard Bonyngue conducting. London A 4254 (Stereo OSA 1254) Two records.

In a highly imaginative and effective recreation of a "command performance" before Queen Victoria in the great 19th Century years from Jenny Lind to Nellie Melba. Miss Sutherland moves surely and confidently through a varied series of operatic arias and simple songs. She ranges effortlessly from vocal fireworks to unpretentious melodies with tremendous vocal agility, purity of tone and simple dignity in one of the finest recordings she has made to date.

Meyerbeer's "Shadow Song" finds the great soprano at her superb finest, but there are many other outstanding moments too. Bonyngue's sensitive and imaginative support is liable to be lost in his wife's great performance, but results wouldn't be the same without it.

Mazurkas (complete); Orazio Frugoni, pianist. Vox VUX 2017 (No stereo).

Very few people want to listen to all 51 mazurkas of Chopin at a single sitting, but it's nice to have a full set around when you want a particular one. Frugoni, Swiss pianist now teaching at Eastman School of Music, is better known as a concert artist in Europe than in this country, but he offers a crisply played, well proportioned series in clean, ringing sound. Incidentally, these low cost, two-disc Vox Twins are recordings worth investigating.

Also Sprach Zarathustra; Philharmonia Orchestra, Lorin Maazel conducting. Angel 35944 (Stereo S 35944).

This colorful tone poem would probably enjoy greater popularity if it had a different title and less complicated "program." It is actually an imaginative work with many lovely moments and striking orchestral brilliance, and Maazel leads a moving, alive and understanding performance in glowing sound. Excellent.

Till Eulenspiegel (Strauss), Afternoon of a Faun (Debussy), El Salon Mexico (Copland), Dances from "Nutcracker" (Tchaikovsky); New York Philharmonic, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Columbia ML 5841 (Stereo MS 6441).

Titling this album "Leonard Bernstein Conducts for Young People" is merely a sales gimmick, although the selections would undoubtedly appeal to youngsters as he performs them.

As usual, Bernstein's driving, rhythmic flair is at its best in the more modern pieces, although tempos are somewhat questionable. Presumably music used in some of his celebrated Youth Concerts, the readings are good if not exceptional and sound is very bright.

Stamps Houseboating Truly International Sport

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

Houseboating has become more and more of a recreational affair in this country. But living-on-the-water and its various improvisations is a serious matter in other lands.

For example, in Gabon, which is on the West coast of Africa at the equator, they float timber in a big way. One stamp, reproduced here, shows a timber raft on the Ogowe river. The raft is so large and so long the natives have constructed huts on it in which to live while waiting for ships to haul away the logs.

In French West Africa, on the Niger river, a familiar sight is the trading canoe with its tent-like shelters serving as home-and-store.

On the northwest coast of Borneo lies Brunei, a British protectorate. There, at the mouth of the Kampong river, is an entire village built over the water. It seems there's a shortage of usable acreage for housing. And people like the Sultan (traditional ruler of Brunei) can't be expected to have less than the choicer land sites.

So this kind of housing for the commoners was okay with Sultan Ahmed Tajudin Akhuzul Khari Wad-din; and with a name like that, who can argue?

Then there's a picture of an ancient double canoe bearing a chieftain's hut on the stamp of French Polynesia (Oceania). Those film goers who saw "Mutiny On The Bounty" will remember this fancied-up version of a house boat off of which stepped the Tahitian chief who greeted Captain Bligh. What's more, the chief on our vertical stamp bears a strong resemblance to this very dignitary.

As for the last stamp in our display, it seems the Polynesians even have their own answer to having things well equipped. An American houseboat might boast of portable hi-fi; but who's to complain if the portable music originates with a long-haired miss playing a guitar?

Oh, there's a lot to be learned from stamps.

"Insurance Question Box"

QUESTION:

My workman accidentally damaged a hot water heater he was installing for a customer. Our insurance company will not pay for the damage. Why?

ANSWER:

The usual General Liability policy does not cover damage to property in your "care, custody or control". Should such insurance cover damage to property which is being handled or upon which work is being done, payment for all kinds of careless, negligent or poor workmanship would be made. Certain property can be insured for damage in handling. Why not consult us?

OSHKOSH—Junior Theater of Oshkosh will celebrate its tenth birthday this summer with its production of the Broadway musical "Annie Get Your Gun" Aug. 7-10 at the Grand Theatre.

Mary Ellen Thoma and Mark Schumerth will star in the Irving Berlin hit as Annie Oakley and as Frank Butler. Other leads are Lynne Morton as Dolly Tate, Leni Wright as Winnie Tate, Lynn Seibel as Tommy Keeler and Jim Burger as Charlie Davenport.

Others in the cast are Tom Burgett, Sharon Eichinger, Carol Farnell, Jodie Schoenwetter, Irene Wright, Dave Wollangk, John Oldani, Dale Klitzke and Lois Wesenberg.

Production crew chiefs include Glen Boga, stage manager, John Koebl, lighting, Leonard Podgham, set construction, and Toni Foxx, business manager.

Advisors to Junior Theater are Terrance Oldani and Converse Marks.

Dramatic director Fred Steinbrechter was one of the original members of Junior Theater and is returning to stage this production.

In its previous nine summers, Junior Theater has produced and presented "Grammercy Ghost," "Sweethearts," "Of Thee I Sing," "South Pacific," "Pajama Game," "Kiss Me Kate," "Guys and Dolls," "Kismet," and last year "West Side Story."

Not only will this be the tenth year of Junior Theater productions, but Aug. 9 will mark the 80th anniversary of the first performance to be staged in the Grand Theatre.

*Cast as Frank in "Annie Get Your Gun" is Mark Schumerth, 443 Church Ave., Oshkosh. Schumerth, who will be a senior at St. Norbert College this fall, is in his sixth year with junior theatre, and has made major appearances in "Guys and Dolls," "Kismet" and "West Side Story." ## Gloria Link Is Green Ram Star of benefit to her students at Oshkosh State. Invited to appear with the Green Ram company this summer were three OSC students, Wil Denson and Pat and Shirley Wilson.

Miss Link says that the mother in "Long Day's Journey" is a "magnificent character to deal with," but adds that she is "panicked a bit" by the quality of the role.

"She has so many facets, it would take a lifetime to realize them all . . . It is challenging, it is enormous."

Because she wishes to give her own, individualistic interpretation to the role, Miss Link has avoided seeing either the stage or screen productions of O'Neill's script.

"That is probably better for me as an actress," she declares. "It would be fatal to see somebody else's performance."

Pee Wee King, Fair Headliner

CHILTON — Bandleader PeeWee King and his musicians will headline billings for the Calumet County Fair which opens Aug. 30 and runs through Sept. 2.

The band and show will be the feature grandstand attraction Sunday afternoon and evening, Sept. 1. Several acts are also being booked to augment the musical show.

On Monday evening, Sept. 2, fairgoers will have an opportunity to see the stage play, "Down River." The musical comedy, presented by the Wisconsin Idea Theatre, depicts the life of a logger when he comes to a small logging town.

Stock car races have been scheduled for Saturday evening, Aug. 31, and there will be feature races again Monday afternoon.

The traditional state-wide horse-pulling contest has again been scheduled for Sunday morning.

The Airport Dilemma

There was a startling and rather dramatic development in the airport hearing at Wausau this week when the CAB examiner, Mr. Edward T. Stodola, opened the third week of testimony with a statement from the bench in which he pinpointed the problem of future airline service for the Fox River Valley.

He stated the question so succinctly that the Post-Crescent is reprinting it in full in these columns today.

Examiner Stodola cut through the verbiage of all the testimony and picked out the vital question which must be answered: Can the Oshkosh airport provide the best possible regional service that this area is going to need in the years to come?

The hearings have now been adjourned to Washington where they will resume next week. The examiner will seek expert testimony from the FAA and other government experts on the question he has proposed.

Mr. Stodola's statement has rekindled some hope that a joint regional airport to serve all of the Fox River Valley may still be possible. But before anyone becomes optimistic about that prospect, let's face some hard facts:

1. Examiner Stodola later in the week said he "would prefer that the county boards of Outagamie and Winnebago would take the initiative. It is an Outagamie and Winnebago County problem and should be solved at the local level." But this presumes that there is a willingness on the part of Winnebago to review the present situation, and the promoters of the Oshkosh airport apparently are still completely adamant in their position against any joint airport.

2. What testimony is Mr. Stodola likely to hear in Washington from the FAA? After all this agency is the one which has approved the heavy Federal investment in the Oshkosh airport. Are these people likely now to say they were wrong, and that this money should not have been invested in a port which is inadequate for the future needs of this area? We fear that Mr. Stodola may find it difficult to get the unbiased and impartial information he is seeking.

Outagamie County in the interim finds itself in a ticklish position. For three years it has been on record as favoring a joint two-county airport. Yet it has been confronted with a complete roadblock at Oshkosh and no disposition up to now on the part of either state or Federal officials to take any leadership in the situation. Therefore it has had no choice but to go ahead with plans for a modern airport for its own use. Bonds worth $2.8 millions have been sold and about $250,000 has already been spent on the project.

Certainly if there seemed to be any real hope for a revival of the joint airport proposal, Outagamie County would want to cooperate both with the Federal authorities and Winnebago County.

But Outagamie County first of all must protect its own interests. It needs a new airport very badly. It must proceed with its own project unless something very concrete is offered as an alternative, and very soon.

It would be a cruel hoax on the people of the Valley if this hope were raised and nothing ever came of it.

The Post-Crescent from the beginning has strongly supported the concept of a joint airport to serve both Oshkosh and the Fox Cities; in fact the idea was first put forward in these columns.

We congratulate Mr. Stodola on his perception and his courage in the statement which he made at Wausau. It is obvious that he sees the solution to the Valley's airport problem. This is the first time a Federal official has championed the joint airport idea.

But the question is: Can Examiner Stodola sell the idea to the CAB and the FAA in Washington, and to Winnebago County?

Mr. Stodola's Statement

This is the complete text of the statement made by Edward T. Stodola, examiner for the Civil Aeronautics Board, at the start of the third week of regional airport hearings in Wausau last Monday. (Explanations in parentheses added):

"There is no doubt whatever in my mind that the proposed proof of Winnebago County, the Fisher report of 1960 (recommending a joint Winnebago-Outagamie airport), and the testimony of Mr. Roger Baird (of Kimberly-Clark Corp.) and Mr. Victor Minahan (publisher of the Post-Crescent) have raised an issue of transcendental importance to this proceeding.

"Simply stated, the question is this: If in fact the Oshkosh airport should be proven to be both presently and potentially inadequate, would it not make more sense from physical, technical, traffic and cost considerations for the two counties, Outagamie and Winnebago, to have a joint or common airport somewhere west of Lake Winnebago and north of Oshkosh to serve the Oshkosh-Appleton complex of cities?

"Gentlemen, I shall also assure you that this issue will be thoroughly explored before this hearing is closed.

"As a career official of the United States Government I have but one row to hoe and but one ax to grind; namely, the public good and the public interest. I could not care less about current local civic rivalries and past recriminations over appropriate airport sites.

"Above all, it is necessary to remind ourselves that the primary concern of this case is not so much the airport needs of today, but the promise of scheduled airline service in the great tomorrow. What the area here under consideration needs in the years to come is the finest, the most safe, and the best available airport facilities at a reasonable cost to the taxpaying public. I would remind the public officials and lawyers in this hearing of the age-old admonition that where there is no vision the people perish.

"I am sure that no one connected with this proceeding would some day either in the near or distant future, want to be held accountable to his conscience in not cooperating for the provision of airport facilities that will, above all, be safe, reasonably adequate, and the least costly in the long run.

"Who knows—perhaps not in the foreseeable future—that someday in the time to come really good regional airport facilities as they now have in Green Bay, as can be had between Appleton and Oshkosh, as can be had here in central Wisconsin and at other points under investigation, will not only provide really good air transportation to the north and to the south, but also more and better service to the east and west. And when I am talking about good airport facilities, gentlemen, I mean the very best that modern technology and available money can provide."

Help for Worthy Students

At a time when a higher ratio of high school graduates than ever before is heading for matriculation at colleges and universities, it is encouraging to read the recent report of state officials about the wide variety of loans, scholarships and other aids available to those students of good academic attainment and promise who may need them.

The Coordinating Committee for Higher Education said it compiled the report to show prospective students who may not know how much encouragement the public, the schools and various benefactors of the schools and colleges have provided for them. Last year Wisconsin students, public and private, received at least 9,000 loans, 6,000 institutional scholarships and held about 12,000 jobs at the schools. The report does not cover private loans, scholarships, awards and other forms of assistance doubtless provided that were not channeled through the institutions.

The Coordinating Committee gesture was a thoughtful one. We have known of instances where young boys and girls of distinction in high school performance missed the opportunity to advance their education because they were not aware of the variety and number of financial aids available to worthy aspirants.

Much of this assistance is in the form of public money, including the generous loan programs of the state and national governments. The state loan program, we are confident, is one of the most comprehensive and helpful of its kind in the country and it will stand as a landmark to our collective devotion to the ideal of extending educational opportunity.

In many instances, we fear, prospective students whose budgets are somewhat short of their expected subsistence needs at college may not know of the extent through which student employment opportunities have grown in such cities as Madison, for example, where employers over the generations have learned of the value of earnest part-time workers whose primary purpose is self-improvement through study at the state university. Each of our state-supported schools, by law, has a quota of scholarships available to promising young people, as do many of our private institutions.

The boy or girl who finished his high school work last June and wonders about his financial capacity for further education should not give up too soon. He should consult with students now enrolled at the college in which he is interested. He should write to their admissions offices. Scores of young men and women in our own time managed to scrape through with fewer opportunities.

natural for Dr. Hewlett Johnson, 89, the former Red Dean of Canterbury, to call his new home the Red House. Besides, he has installed red floors and red wallpaper in it.

But what about the White House in Washington? True, it is white in color, but will not some ardent supporters of integration soon start claiming that to call the home of the U. S. president the White House is to discriminate against black-skinned American citizens?

Nothing would surprise us. Racial extremists are bound to try anything once.

Visit to Defense Center Great Persuader to Keep the Peace

BY ERIC SEVAREID

COLORADO SPRINGS—Space may never be "dominated" — to use the President's terminology — by man, but man is cluttering up God's infinitude with chunks of metal from encapsulated payloads of nuts, bolts, washers and other "debris" and it won't be too long before any flight by an astronaut will involve a calculated risk of collision, however small a risk.

Sevareid

When this writer walked into the briefing room of the Joint Aerospace Defense Division there were 617 objects in orbit or slipping out of orbit. When I walked out 30 minutes later the number was 620, according to the "Menu Board" hanging on the corridor wall.

By 1967, approximately 5,000 such objects will be circling the globe in the celestial trash bin. All I have no doubt, will be tagged, tracked and their immediate and future positions plotted within one one thousandth of a degree by the highly efficient officers and civilians and their magical instruments working out of this well-ordered Pandora's box located in the shadows of Pikes Peak. There are, after all, 650 American and friendly "sensors" keeping up the inventory all around the world with instantly reported observations every fifteen seconds. Little wonder that communications into and out of these air and space defense command posts here run to a "phone bill" of more than a hundred million dollars a year.

NUMBER ONE THREAT

Manned bombers are still rated the number one exterior threat to North America and the defenses against them are fantastically complex, remarkably efficient, by all the tests so far conducted, and fantastically expensive. At some point the Pentagon will decide that the intercontinental ballistic missile has taken over the number one priority threat and a deep cutback will be in order.

For this farflung system defense may be cheaper, but since there is absolutely nothing but passive U. S. civil defense against the missile and won't be until the mystical and perhaps mythical day of space platforms from which offensive missiles could be caught at take-off, there will be little joy in such economics. It is the sole business of men in uniform and they seem to me to be becoming a new breed. More sophisticated intellectually and more able to work lucidly with civilian science than their fathers — it is their business to fight in case of war, but if anybody needs a lesson in the indispensability of political agreements to keep the country safe, a visit to this place will do it as nothing else.

Interstate Law Should Regulate Drivers of Cars

From The Asbury Park (N.J.) Press

There is no reason why a driver who has risked his life and the lives of others in one state should be permitted to drive in another. Car driving is interstate traffic in the real sense of the word and there must be some regulatory system devised to meet the situation where a lawbreaker has his driving privileges suspended in one state only to keep on driving because his license was issued in another and there is no communication between the two.

Auto accidents are a principal cause of death in the United States. Anything that will diminish them should be encouraged.

Is the Modern Megalopolis Causing More Heart Attacks?

BY LYNN POOLE

Is the modern man digging his grave as he sends up skyscrapers? Does his mighty megalopolis have its own grim system of checks and balances—in the form of increased heart disease?

In an editorial, published in Circulation, an official journal of the American Heart Association, Dr. Herbert L. Ratcliffe, professor of Pathology at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, thinks that modern man is doing himself damage by crowding in metropolitan areas.

Based on his observations of animals at Philadelphia's Zoological Gardens, he thinks urban density and intensified social and economic pressure that accompany it may be an important underlying cause of atherosclerosis in man. Atherosclerosis, hardening of the arteries, often predisposes men to heart attacks, strokes and other circulatory disease.

Results of Zoo Study
Dr. Ratcliffe's belief that urban density may be a health menace rests upon the 10-fold increase in heart disease over an 8-year period which he has observed among mammals at the Philadelphia Zoo—with no other variables in their environment except an increase in the zoo's population. During this period, deaths from heart attacks became relatively common, though none had occurred prior to 1955.

Dr. Ratcliffe states that the Zoo's autopsy records are continuous since 1901 so that patterns of disease among its inhabitants are well known. Furthermore, the animal collection has been fed a constant diet of high quality since 1935. The increase in heart attack deaths is not due to greater longevity on the part of the animals. Both male and female mammals have been affected about equally, attain approximately equal ages.

About five years before the increase in heart disease became evident, the zoo began a continuing project to assemble and maintain breeding pairs and groups of many species of mammals. As the pairs matured, bred and raised their young, relationships among all members of exhibition groups became more and more complex.

The investigator believes the intensified social interaction among these animals can be directly correlated with the increase in coronary disease and the higher frequency of heart attack deaths. Such correlations have already been confirmed, he notes, among chickens. He finds it reasonable to assume that man, whose place in society's "pecking order" involves constant interaction among increasingly larger groups, may be reacting in a similar fashion.

"Urban man does not lend himself quite so fully to the intensive study that has been given to wild populations of lower animals," Dr. Ratcliffe notes. "Nevertheless, available evidence suggests that man's response to population density will be found to correspond closely to that of other animals. The greater susceptibility of the human male in urban societies to coronary arteriosclerosis possibly reflects his much greater mean exposure to economic competition."

Richard S. Davis Dies; Writings Inspiration For Young Journalists

BY JOHN TORINUS

Professional newspapermen throughout the state were saddened this week by the death of Richard S. Davis. He was considered one of the finest writers ever to grace the Wisconsin newspaper scene.

Mr. Davis had been on the staff of the Milwaukee Journal for 43 years until his retirement in 1961. During the peak of that career he was the Journal's drama and music critic, but his versatility as a reporter and writer led him into many other fields.

Torinus

His career footnotes the fact that writers are made, not born.

A native of Milwaukee, he enrolled at Lawrence College in 1909, but he didn't last out his first semester. The reason is shrouded in lost memories, but it is obvious that at that early age he was already developing the philosophy which he later described as having the courage to "disagree fearlessly."

He then set out on a career as an operatic baritone, studying in Milwaukee, Chicago, New York and Paris. During World War I he worked in a Newark shipyard. He returned to Milwaukee in 1918 on the death of his mother, and there his singing career began and ended the same night. He decided after his debut at the Pabst that he did not have the ability to make it to the top rank. The critical judgment he thus passed on his own talent helped to equip him as a drama and music critic in later life.

It was at this point that he went to work for the old Evening Wisconsin, switching to the Journal several months later. He began as a city hall reporter, became a copy editor and later assistant city editor. It is important to note that he had no experience when he started in the newspaper business. His talents were developed through experience and hard work. They were recognized in 1921 when he was freed of desk work and he became the Journal's critic and a feature writer.

His writing style was so significant that his authorship was readily recognized in stories which didn't carry his by-line. And it remained identifiable whether he was writing a cultural review or covering the death and funeral of Franklin D. Roosevelt or reporting the Kentucky Derby.

This brings up the question: How does one develop a writing style? There are two basic elements: (1) strength of personal character and thought processes which dictate the writer's attitude toward any subject because it is grounded in a strong personal philosophy; and (2) the mechanical facility with words which communicate these thoughts readily and interestingly to the reader.

As colleagues on the Journal put it: "Davis was a man of sharp wit and mighty indignations. He had a vast disdain for the phony and the pretentious. His sympathy for the defeated or unfortunate was equally quick."

"This wit, indignation or sympathy, in various combinations appropriate to the occasions, were reflected in his writings, giving them a human warmth that helps explain why generations of Journal readers found the Davis articles a delight."

Forty-four years after Davis dropped out of Lawrence he finally received a degree from the college. He received the college's doctor of humane letters degree in 1953.

But this event was saddened by a personal tragedy. The night before the ceremony his wife was fatally injured in a fall down a stairway at a friend's house here where the couple was visiting.

Some of the outstanding stories Davis wrote have been collected in book form in "The Best of Davis."

The volume is normal equipment in newspaper offices like ours here at the Post-Crescent. It should be required reading for any young journalist.

The career of Richard S. Davis will be even more worthwhile if his work inspires others in our profession to write with personal magnetism. For this is the real field for the future growth of the newspaper business.

Memphis Visitor Praises Aid by Appleton Police

Editor, Post-Crescent:

Please print this letter to the Appleton Chief of Police:

Dear Chief:
It is not every day that one finds an efficient police officer doing more than what is required of him. Therefore I want to use this opportunity to bring this to your attention.

On Monday July 22, after arriving in the city I parked my car on the parking lot of one of your Krambo stores. While in there my car was bumped by a lady who in turn started to drive away without even checking if there was any damage or not. Two of your officers—Steward and Recker—observed this and they stopped the lady and obtained her address for me. Since they could not locate me they left a note on the windshield of my car. My car was not damaged but I do want to thank these two fine officers through you since I did not get to see them.

This kind of action shows that you must have a fine department and some fine men.

Political Foes Donate Blood

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The Pima County Democratic Committee challenged the county's Republicans to a blood letting contest.

But it was for a good cause. Both political groups gave blood for the Tucson Chapter of the American Red Cross in a campaign with the theme "Pints for Politics."

The Red Cross said use of the blood would be entirely nonpartisan.

Congressional Problems Revolve About Peanuts

From The Wall Street Journal

In a communication to the home folks, one Congressman concedes that in a recent week the "most vital piece of legislation the leadership could find for the House to consider" was a bill to extend for two years the legislative definition of "peanuts."

Quite rightly, however, this legislator notes that the "do nothing" label some people are trying to pin on both houses is a bit unfair. Below the surface Congress has actually been pretty busy; he cites the many committees holding almost daily meetings, the necessary prelude to enacting legislation.

And one thing we can all be reasonably sure of is that Congress will end up passing a number of bills. Especially those having to do with money for all sorts of purposes, some of them essential and many not. Either way, the total won't be peanuts.

More and more Fox Cities residents are turning to houseboating for their summer fun in the water.

A host of boats, mostly from Kaukauna, Appleton, the Twin Cities and Oshkosh, are docked on Lake Poygan ports near Winneconne, the Valley's houseboating center.

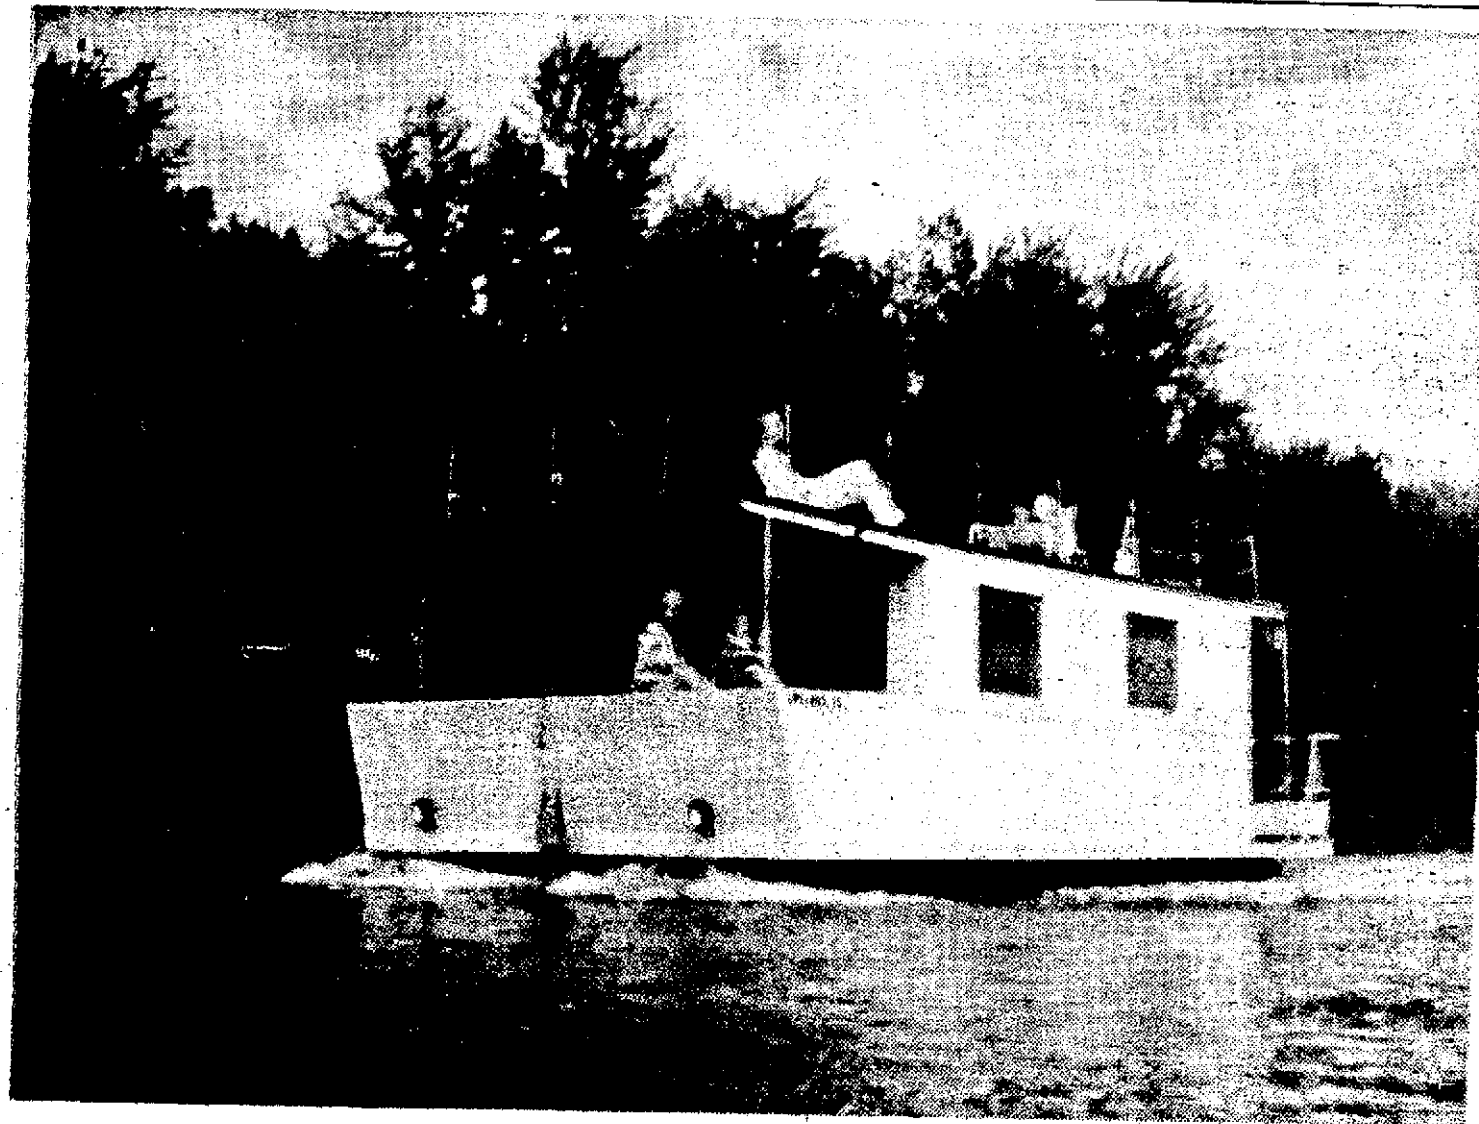

Why houseboats? Most owners of these crafts seem to think they are the answer to every amateur seaman's needs and desires. Houseboat is a literal definition. A houseboat provides its owner with a cottage, and he can take it anywhere he wants to go.

Beds for Four

The average houseboat has bedding for at least four, a dining table, refrigerator, range, rest room and gas heating. The front deck makes an excellent front porch, and the roof is a top-notch sundeck.

The same probably can be said for a cabin cruiser, but there is no price comparison here. A top-notch house boat can be purchased for as little as $4,000, and the only advantage the cabin cruiser has over it is speed.

And where is good water frontage, equipped with a cottage, sold for $4,000? If one seeks luxury in a

Driftwood of Kaukauna, built and owned by the Howard Aderhold family of Neenah and the Michael Lattimer family of Kaukauna, "steams" up a scenic channel of the Wolf River toward Fremont. The craft, now harbored on Lake Poygan near Winneconne, took the Lattimers and Aderholds about six months to complete. Construction was finished in September, 1962.

houseboat, he can go as high as $50,000, but a small craft provides all the desired comforts of home. A low-cost battery converter will even provide line voltage to operate a television or radio set.

A number of do-it-yourselfers have combined their hobby with seamanship and built their own houseboat. Michael Lattimer, Kaukauna, who built his own craft last year, said a houseboat can be home-built for about half the market price.

Lattimer, along with family and friends, started constructing his boat in April, 1962, as a joint project with his father-in-law, Howard Aderhold, Neenah. The Lattimers and Aderholds took their almost-finished craft, the "Driftwood," on its maiden voyage down the Fox River from Kaukauna at the end of July.

By September, construction was complete, and "Driftwood" made its first major voyage, down the Fox, into Lake Winnebago and the Wolf River and finally Lake Poygan, to its permanent dock at Winneconne.

Lattimer said he couldn't estimate how many hours went into its construction. After having the large metal pontoons welded, the two families built the deck, mounted it, and had it taken to the Kaukauna Boat Club, on the Fox River. There they mounted the cabin and roof.

Ideal Home Base

Winneconne serves as an ideal home base for houseboaters. The city, on Lake Poygan, has access to the Wolf River north to New London, providing a scenic day's cruise.

Some of the more experienced "captains" have taken pride in their voyages through the Wolf, into Lake Winnebago and up the Fox. For owners of larger boats, Winneconne is a gateway to Green Bay and the Great Lakes, through the Fox.

The average houseboat makes pretty fair time. It took the Lattimers about 10 hours to go from Kaukauna to Winneconne. Depending upon size and motor power, top speeds average between 10 and 20 knots.

But speed is not one of the essential properties of the houseboat. It is more a floating cottage that can change its river or lake frontage anytime its owner chooses.

Three Dynamic Actresses Vie For Spotlight in Attic Play

When three of the most dynamic actresses available to a director are cast in the same play, the situation backstage is likely to be almost as explosive as that under the lights.

That is unless the play is a non-professional production, and the actresses are good friends who share both a love of acting and a love for the camaraderie that goes with community theatre.

Attic Theatre patrons are offered an unusual treat as Joan Hoffmann, Kay Kirchberg, and Bunny Millstein hold a good-natured contest for center stage in the Arthur Laurents comedy, "Invitation to a March," opening Saturday at 8:15 p.m. at the Lawrence Music-Drama Center.

Adult Comedy

Briefly the plot of the sophisticated adult comedy deals with a bride "bewitched" by the house she, her mother Lily (Mrs. Millstein), and young brother Cary rent from Camilla Jablonski (Mrs. Hoffmann). As fate would have it, when the groom's mother Dee Dee (Mrs. Kirchberg) and father Tucker arrive for the festivities, it turns out that Camilla and Tucker are former lovers. To complicate things for the second generation, Camilla has a son who holds a strange attraction for the bride-to-be.

Mrs. Hoffmann, active in leading roles throughout the group's 14-year history, has been cast as Camilla—a woman of character and fascination. It is a challenging and interesting role, and will add another nostalgic memory for Mrs. Hoffmann. She is popular with local audiences for such portrayals as Rosemary in last summer's "Picnic."

Doting Grandmother

A proud and doting grandmother, Mrs. Hoffmann caused one casual observer last summer to remark, "You know, that's a nice-looking pair of legs for a grandmother."

Glencoe, Ill., where the Threshold Players are located, was the home of Mrs. Kirchberg before she moved to Appleton. There she played leads in plays ranging from "I Remember Mama" to "Ladies in Retirement." Her outstanding role with Attic Theatre was the mother in "Sabrina Fair."

Dee Dee resorts to such devices as dyeing her hair blue and smoking cigars and cigarettes in long holders.

In contrast with Mrs. Hoffmann and Mrs. Kirchberg, the non-professional acting career of Mrs. Millstein is short and began in a relatively inauspicious way. She volunteered to do makeup for a show in which her husband had a part. From there she went on to do character parts in "Petting Shed" and "Peer Gynt." Last summer saw the high point of her career, her unforgettable Mrs. Jacoby in "A Majority of One."

Lily is an entirely new type of role for Mrs. Millstein. "No shoe polish in the hair" comments the lady, who welcomes the opportunity to wear pretty clothes, be her own age, and as an added bonus, play the mother of her own son, Alan, who is cast as Cary.

"Invitation to a March" is the third of five summer productions for Attic Theatre and will run through Sunday, Aug. 11, with Monday and Friday off, and the usual two performances on Saturday, Aug. 10.

Plays to follow are "A Far Country," opening Aug. 17, and "The King and I," opening Aug. 26.

Helen Keller's Story Told in Riverside Show

NEENAH—Having scored a resounding success with their opening show of the summer season, "A Thurber Carnival," the Riverside Players are now preparing to give their audiences a change of pace.

Opening Aug. 1, for a three-night run, under the direction of Richard Henkel, is William Gibson's "The Miracle Worker," a drama based on the early life of Helen Keller.

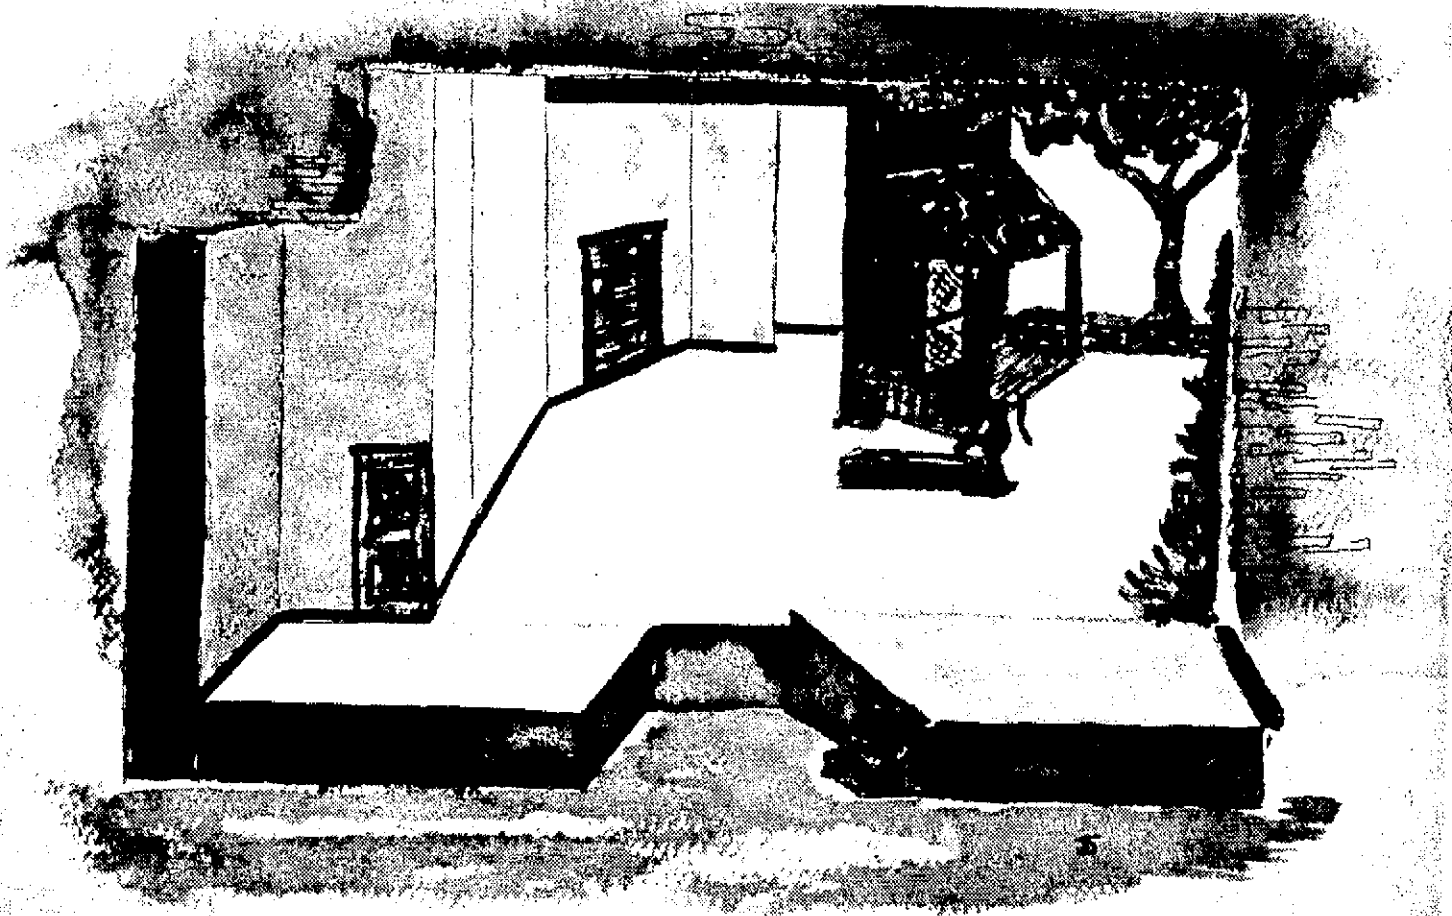

In the Riverside cast are Terry McIntyre, as the seven-year-old Helen, who is an undisciplined, unreachable child until she is brought out of her dark, troubled world by Annie Sullivan, a spunky Irish girl from Boston.

Cast as the purposeful Anne is Ellen Long. Grover Chandler and Marilyn Hills play Mr. and Mrs. Keller. Others in the cast are James Hedlund, Helen Firkus, Betty Whitcomb, George Walsh, Warren Miedke, Robin Richey, Karen Graverson, Dan, Amy and Mary Henkel, Anne Lyons, Kay Hanson, Ann Coeper and Debbie Whitcomb.

Setting for the play presented a major challenge, involving as it does seven separate acting areas in and around the Keller homestead in Alabama, and, briefly, the Perkins Institution for the Blind, in Boston.

The setting was designed by David Goodwin, who last year performed the same function for "The Diary of Anne Frank." Tom Hanson is responsible for lighting, and Gerry Malotke, sound.

Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

Designed by David Goodwin, the setting for the Riverside Players' production of "The Miracle Worker" provides seven separate acting areas. The play opens at Riverside Pavilion, Neenah, on Aug. 1.

Lennon Sisters Have Roots in Fox Cities

On Christmas Eve, 1955, Lawrence Welk gave his televiewers a Christmas gift of rare delight—a gift to them, and as it developed, a gift to himself and his entire Champagne Music Family.

Four young girls stood before the microphones on Welk's ABC-TV stage. They were gathered around the youngest, little Janet, who stood on a black box, out of camera range so as to be "in frame" with the microphone and cameras.

Thus was born professionally, the group billed simply as The Lennon Sisters. Two weeks later, after receiving thousands of fan letters, Maestro Welk proclaimed them "regulars" on his show.

Now, eight years later, Dianne, eldest of the quartet, is married and retired. The other three, Peggy, 23, Kathy, 21, and Janet, just 17, continue in the ABC-TV spotlight.

Furthermore, when they make concert appearances on their own they are the only singers in show business who equal or nearly outgross Welk's own occasional out-of-town appearances.

One such appearance was the Lennons' recent engagement at the Outagamie County Fair, Seymour. The three famous singing sisters and their father, William (Bill) Lennon of Venice, Calif., spent their free moments between fair acts visiting relatives and getting acquainted with their family's original home.

The Lennons' roots are deep in Fox Cities soil.

Judge James Lennon started the American family tree when he and his wife came to Appleton to settle from Ireland. This couple had 11 children. One of their sons, John, married Minnie Lehman.

John and Minnie Lehman Lennon had one child,

This fall the Lennon Sisters, who have grown to young womanhood before the eyes of millions of fans, start their ninth year with The Lawrence Welk Show on ABC-TV. Carrying on since Dianne's retirement are Kathy, Janet and Peggy.

Bert, father of the present Bill Lennon, and grandfather of the Lennon sisters.

Born in Appleton, Bert Lennon was a cub reporter on the old Appleton Daily Post while he was a student at Ryan High School. He eventually settled in Venice, Calif., where he raised a family of eight boys and one girl.

Bill Lennon told the Post-Crescent during his recent visit that his children's flair for singing stems from the Lehman-Lennon clan.

He himself was a professional boy tenor, managed by his father, Bert, on the Keith Orpheum and Franchot Marco circuits in the late 1920's and early 1930's. Later he sang professionally with the Lennon Brothers Quartet, from whom his own daughters learned the basics of harmony.

Now he has come full circle again, managing his own daughters. The girls sang frequently in California, and sky-rocketed to their present fame when Lawrence Welk heard them and signed them for his show.

Although the Lennons have many relatives in the Appleton area, they are closest to Mrs. Philip H. Miller, the girls' great-aunt, and her daughter, Florence, 821 S. Pierce Ave. They have kept up a family correspondence throughout the years, and have visited one another whenever possible.

Mrs. Miller is a sister of the late Mrs. Minnie Lehman Lennon, the songsters' great-grandmother.

During their fair engagement, the Lennons stayed at Hotel Conway, and commuted by private car to the fairgrounds each day. On Sunday they attended church in Appleton, surprising worshippers by singing two hymns, "Pans Angelicus" and "Song of My Savior."

Janet is a senior in high school this fall. Peggy and Kathy are out of school. They left by plane for a Monday matinee and evening performance at a fair at Peoria, Ill.

Throughout their stay, the girls were besieged by autograph seekers and well-wishers after each performance, and after church Sunday. Despite the crowds around them, the girls never lost their naturally pleasant personalities, smiling and signing autographs and often exchanging small pleasantries with their public.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR MIND?

CAN WE IDENTIFY NEUROTIC BEHAVIOR?

YES ☐ NO ☐
Yes. Neurotic behavior is an expression of inner desires unrelated to outside realities. In extreme cases the individual thinks he is Napoleon or even God. In less extreme cases he thinks he can do as he pleases without reference to what is possible, or to the consequences of his actions. As a result, the neurotic is often in trouble, and usually calling for someone to get him out of it.

ARE MODERN CHILDREN PRIVILEGED?

YES ☐ NO ☐
Yes. Modern children are privileged because they have more choices than ever before. They can choose to be a doctor, a lawyer, a pilot, or a clown. They can choose to be a scientist, a musician, or a dancer. They can choose to be a hero or a villain. They can choose to be a person who lives by the rules or a person who lives by their own. Growing up in this kind of world is a very

MORAL CONVICTIONS WILL MAKE YOU UNPOPULAR!

RIGHT ☐ WRONG ☐

Wrong, usually. If a person with convictions is unpopular, it's often because he rejects those who disagree with him. He becomes self-righteous and hostile toward others. He is then unpopular, not because of his morals but because of his negative attitude toward others. If you really accept others as persons, you usually needn't worry about being unpopular.

Alert Kennel Club Is Asset To Community

BY BUD LARIMER

Besides the infinite ramifications of its contributions to the enhancement and improvement of Dogdom, an alert and progressive kennel club can contribute advantageously to, and be a real asset of, the community in which it operates.

Most important for its organization and continued successful maintenance is congeniality, tolerance, and a high degree of unity on its aims, ideals and contributions to the public. Being an A.K.C. Kennel Club, its greatest effort should be to enhance and improve the welfare of the pure-bred dog. By attending and participating in licensed shows, matches and obedience trials the members will not only maintain continuous improvement in their individual techniques in showing, breeding and grooming, but are able to dip at will into that endless stream of communication on such matters that is the happy privilege of those true Brothers of the Fancy.

There is no dog person alive so knowledgeable that he will not come back enriched by some additional bit of information from every show, trial, match or meeting that he attends. Pedigrees, breeding, rearing pups, training hints, feeding experiments, trimming gimmicks, etc. The fields of these communications are endless.

Informative Programs

A sharp club should see to it that it has arresting and informative programs at its meetings or sponsors as projects, and that such efforts be given just publicity and shared with the non-member general public. It should be stressed that support and furtherance of the pure-bred dogs does not spring from haughty snobbishness; it is based on good, hard common sense. The reputable and dedicated pure-bred breeder has a pride in his product and puts his very best into such production. Heaven knows, he is not out for "the fast buck;" he will not knowingly disseminate inferior quality; he is "creating something beautiful;" often a personal dream.

The differences between such types of breeders and exhibitors, and the dog-mart types of breeders, should be stressed, explained and illustrated. The general public should be convincingly shown why it is to their material advantage to support the former and shun the latter.

The club should lend its support to all forms of sane and reputable humane organizations dealing with the manifold problems that surround the mixed-bred and mongrel members of our canine tribe. Public enlightenment should be consistently presented as to the best and quickest methods of preventing or reducing these problems. Correct and authoritative information should also be presented to the public as programs, or written publicity, on matters of pet dog care, training, purchase, legal aspects and rabies. One supremely vital field in which some alert club could achieve the Immortal Hall of Fame would be to become the focal point for a wide-spread organization to keep close track of, report on, and concen-

Flavorful Camp Cookery

Many an expert angler or camper will say that the only way to fix freshly caught trout (or any other fine catch of fish) is simply to fry it in butter, oil or bacon fat. This brings out the delicate flavor. To give a choice gourmet touch, serve with pimiento-stuffed olives "as is" or sliced in sauces easily made at the campsite or prepared ahead of time and carefully refrigerated if pack space is at a premium. Add to these hot wedges of raisin or currant-filled Skillet Scones and piping hot coffee . . . and there's a camp meal to savor!

Olive-Mayonnaise Sauce

- |  |                                      |
|--|--------------------------------------|
| $\frac{3}{4}$ cup mayonnaise                     | 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind         |
| 1 small onion, chopped                           | 2 tablespoons lemon juice            |
| $\frac{1}{3}$ cup stuffed olives, finely chopped | 2 tablespoons celery, finely chopped |
| 2 tablespoons chopped parsley                    | Sliced stuffed olives                |

Olive-Anchovy Butter for Trout

- |                                   |  |
|-----------------------------------|--|
| $\frac{1}{2}$ cup softened butter | 2 tablespoons vinegar                    |
| 2 tablespoons sugar               | $\frac{1}{4}$ cup chopped stuffed olives |
| $\frac{1}{8}$ teaspoon pepper     | 1 tablespoon anchovy paste               |
| $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon onion salt | $\frac{1}{3}$ cup chopped celery         |
| 1 egg, beaten                     | Sliced stuffed olives                    |

beat in egg until smooth. Add vinegar, chopped olives, anchovy paste and celery, beat well. Garnish with sliced olives. Serve with fried trout. Recipe makes one and one-half cups of sauce.

Piquant Pike Sauce

- |                                 |  |
|---------------------------------|--|
| 1 pkg garlic salad dressing mix | $\frac{1}{4}$ cup chopped stuffed olives |
| 2 tablespoons sugar             | $\frac{1}{2}$ cup salad oil              |
| 2 tablespoons prepared mustard  | $\frac{1}{4}$ cup vinegar                |

Combine all ingredients, cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, to serving temperature. Serve over fried pike. Recipe makes about one cup of sauce.

Skillet Scones

- |                                       |   |
|---------------------------------------|---|
| $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar               | 1 egg                                   |
| $\frac{1}{3}$ cup shortening          | 1 egg yolk                              |
| $\frac{1}{2}$ cup currants or raisins | $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk |

Sift together flour and sugar. Cut or rub in shortening until mixture is crumbly. Stir in raisins and orange rind. Beat egg and extra egg yolk together. Blend egg and quarter cup of milk. Add liquid all at once to flour mixture, stirring until flour is moistened. Blend in more milk, if needed, to make a soft dough. Spread evenly in bottom of lightly greased 10-inch skillet. Cover and place on rack over hot coals. Check after 10 minutes, if bottom edge is golden brown, remove some of coals or raise rack. Cover and continue baking for five or 10 minutes longer or until surface of scones is dry and firm to touch. Cut into wedges to serve. Recipe makes 10 to 12 scones.

Skillet Scones at Home

These easy-to-make scones may be made at home in either oven or on top of the range. The same recipe is followed through the step of placing the soft dough in the skillet for both types. When the oven-bake method is used, beat the remaining egg white (from the yolk in above recipe) until it's frothy, brush over top of dough in skillet. Sprinkle with two tablespoons of sugar. Bake uncovered in 425-degree oven 12 to 15 minutes or until golden brown.

Cover skillet if scones are to be cooked on top of the stove. Do not use topping suggested for oven scones. Cook over low heat 25 to 30 minutes or until surface is dry and firm to touch. If desired, spread surface with three tablespoons orange marmalade before cutting.

Algeria's Hours of Terror

The Fratricides. By Maurice Edelman. Random House. $4.95.

Calling on his knowledge of French politics and the North African scene, the author has written a terse story of the Algerian fight for independence—a bitter quarrel which set countryman against countryman, brother against brother, and in the course of its eight years, nearly destroyed a great nation.

At the climax of the struggle, in the last terror-ridden weeks before the Evian peace agreement, the OAS tried frantically to stave off an armistice and win the French Army to its side by provoking the Algerian underground through sheer brutality.

Mass Terror

"We must instill fear in two ways. First, by the selective execution of traitors—by definition, a traitor is anyone who opposes or thwarts the authority of the OAS. . . . Second, by a general intimidation when there is need for mass action. . . ."

Maurice Edelman, a linguist in French, Italian, Spanish and Russian, has lived in the center of post-war history. He has been a member of the British Parliament since 1945, and is vice president of the Franco-British relations committee. During World War II he served as a foreign correspondent with the American army in Algeria. In 1958 he was decorated as an officer of the Legion of Honor by General de Gaulle.

He is probably one of the few novelists to receive a letter of praise from De Gaulle himself, expressing admiration for his book: "the atmosphere in which 'The Fratricides' is situated is evoked in a gripping manner and the characters are alive, human, in the round."

Bleeding City

The story is set against the background of Algiers, a city slowly bleeding to death. The theme is the three-cornered war between the Algerian Arabs, the Gaullist French and the OAS. The plot is built around four people caught in the violent cross-currents of the time: Dr. Hassid, an old-fashioned, distinguished member of the medical faculty at the University of Algiers; his daughter Elaine, married to de Croissillon (a member of the OAS), in love with duPic, one of the "barbouze" (Gaullist agents).

"... I'm frightened in Algeria. I don't mean for myself—I'm frightened because of all the children who no longer go to school and the men lying dead in the street. I'm frightened at all the terrible things that are done in the name of goodness. . . ."

In an extraordinary story, skillfully written, we follow events in world history, running in terror with the panic-stricken people; mourning with the widows and mothers; siding with the main body of the inhabitants, caught between the OAS and the FLN.

The author's knowledge of international issues has been converted into fictional form with assurance. He has reconstructed a time in history, a society in which self-interest and betrayal were a matter of course, in which moral dilemmas and perverted values clouded human dignity and reason.

A dramatic novel, powerful and impressive, capturing the character of a people and a stricken city.

Pegler: Champion Name-Caller

Pegler: Angry Man of the Press. By Oliver Pilat. Beacon Press. $5.

Westbrook Pegler, the famous newspaper commentator, has been classified as "the champion name-caller of journalistic history."

At the peak of his fame as a columnist, Pegler could count more enemies than almost any other American newspaperman. He coined epithets against many people in what amounted to outright hatred. His sharp words cut a swath strewn with notables; among them, Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, Clare Boothe Luce, Harry Truman, Henry Morgenthau, Mary Pickford and Frank Sinatra.

Some of Pegler's name-calling resulted in feuds with Walter Winchell, Heywood Brown and Col. Frank Knox; he was sued by Drew Pearson and Quentin Reynolds.

The author discusses Pegler's life from the time of his boyhood, on through his stormy career as a reporter, sports writer and columnist. In 1940 he won a $1,000 Pulitzer prize for "articles on scandals in the ranks of organized labor. . . ."

Oliver Pilat has spent his life as a newspaper reporter and correspondent. He has had four previous books published, including "Sodom by the Sea" a history of Coney Island, and "The Atom Spies." He has built a reputation for painstaking accuracy.

The author has tried to tread a middle road, to remain impartial, in his fast-paced, vivid biography of the columnist who labeled himself "the True Crusader of the Press." It is a story of contrasts and controversies: a story of a colorful and unique period in American journalism.

Eichmann Trial Is Subject of Brilliant Study

Eichmann in Jerusalem: A Report on the Banality of Evil. By Hannah Arendt. Viking. $5.50.

Dr. Hannah Arendt, who holds a Ph.D. from the University of Heidelberg, attended the trial of Adolph Eichmann as a reporter and observer. She has taught political philosophy at several universities in the United States since she arrived in 1941, and has received several fellowships and awards.

Her command of politics and philosophy, her study of the Nuremberg trials and the Successor trials make it possible for her to isolate the points of international law and human justice raised in Jerusalem and valid throughout the world. She has penetrated beneath the surface to the subterranean forces that shaped the trial.

Solemn Trial

When Adolph Eichmann was brought to trial in Jerusalem, the eyes of the world were on the courtroom. The scope and solemnity of the trial, the passionate undercurrents, were the center of world interest. An event of unique importance was taking place.

What were the issues? Under what law was he being tried? By what precedent? What manner of man was he?

Much has been written and will be written, both fiction and nonfiction, covering the atrocity extant in the extermination of six million Jews by the Nazis. The author analyzes the issues and historic background of the Eichmann trial, showing what evil reality is. Her study is presented on three levels: legal, psychological and philosophical.

She raises the question of a social conscience. Perhaps her most telling condemnation is the fact that "prominent Jews" sometimes received intervention and were saved, and that in Germany today, this notion of "prominent Jews" has not yet been forgotten.

"There are more than a few people, especially among the cultural elite, who still publicly regret the fact that Germany sent Einstein packing, without realizing that it was a much greater crime to kill little Hans Cohn from around the corner, even though he was no genius."

Damning Point

This is the damning point in the melodrama which was played with living, breathing human players who could not "get up and walk away" once the script was finished.

Dr. Arendt has written a brilliant study, which will remain a key reference for future scholars seeking to analyze the paradox of a barbaric-bureaucracy condoned by a Christian society. A book worth reading and thinking about as it reminds us that by surrendering their individual rights, party members also surrendered their consciences.

Sandy Bull Introduces New Combination of Jazz, Classics

BY MARK OLIVA

Folk music manifests itself in many styles and forms, but a young guitarist has introduced a new interpretation, blending melodies of ethnic origin into a compound of classical and jazz forms.

In his album, "Fantasias," (Vanguard VRS 9119) the artist, Sandy Bull, along with drummer Billy Higgins, expound compositions based on international folk music.

The interpretations, all Bull's, revolve entirely around jazz structures and the pattern of a classical fantasia, but are played on instruments native to folk music, banjo, guitar and drum.

Distinctive Style

"Blend," the first composition, occupying all of side one, fuses together music of many nations in distinctive style. To achieve a tonal illustration, Bull changes the tune of his guitar midway in the selection.

On the second side Bull, unaccompanied, plays sketches on four individual folk tunes. The first, "Carmina Burana Fantasy," is adapted from a Latin verse derived from a stage play.

The second tune, Non Nobis Domine, is a school chorus, with the two parts of the banjo and a third for guitar all played by Bull. "Little Maggie" is a typical Bull work reflecting a drone quality inherent to the artist's style and native to the song.

Bull concludes with "Gospel Tune," a fantasia on the spiritual "Good News." Here he utilizes an electric guitar in Southern spiritual style and accompanies himself on foot cymbals.

Guitar Artistry

The excellent guitar artistry makes the recording a must for any folk music fan interested in the instruments of ethnic music, and the style opens a new and exciting dimension to the progressive jazz buff.

The fidelity of the monaural version is superb, par for Vanguard. The recording also is available in stereo.

Marve Zelonkey, of the folk duo Marve and Arlene, will appear with Marshall Grantos on the radio edition of The People Sing at 5:10 p.m. Saturday on WAPL, 1570. Grantos and Zelonkey will discuss American folk tunes.

Two 'new faces' join Frank Sinatra in the sophisticated comedy, "Come Blow Your Horn," opening Wednesday at the Viking Theatre. They are veteran stage star Molly Picon, left, and 22-year-old Notre Dame graduate Tony Bill. Neither Picon nor Bill had made a major motion picture before being cast in the film version of the Neil Simon stage hit.

trate opposition to adverse dog legislation, in both city and state, before such legislation has been passed

In their "spare" time they could work on pressure, political and otherwise, that revokes some of the worst laws and ordinances already passed. There should be a representative of such a movement at every state capitol and city council. Individual or small group protests, whether verbal or written, will accomplish nothing, nor will efforts based on sentimental appeals. Political pressure and weight of future votes are the only successful avenues of accomplishment.

Recent Discussion

In a recent rather acrimonious discussion on dog ordinances in the Appleton City Council, a statement was made that there were an estimated 2500 dog owners in Appleton. Such a group, multiplied many times in other cities and states, would constitute, united and vocal, an impressive political "big stick." This is the dog owner's only hope for future betterment. No other group of taxpayers gets less for its money, or is more discriminated against. Brood on it and don't just scream and beat your breast after "the worst is yet to come" has come.

As to the club's internal functionings, progress and growth, so much depends upon guarding against and minimizing personality conflicts, pettiness and jealousies. Beware the governing by cliques. It might even be a safety valve to hold one or two informal meetings a year, at which such conflicts and resentments could be aired, discussed and friction reduced to a minimum.

So much for that Utopian Club that probably never will be.

Sacrifice Wisely To Cut Losses

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sacrifice bidding is a field of bridge that average players tend to leave to the experts. The chances are that experts overdo it, just as average players neglect it.

Many inexperienced players have the feeling that a sacrifice bid is slightly unsporting. If good old George can make a game in spades, it's rather mean to overbid in diamonds and take George's hand away from him.

Other players, too sophisticated to share the view just described, avoid sacrifice bids for fear of disaster. They wouldn't mind going down one or two now and then to stop an opponent's game, but they fear an occasional six-trick or seven-trick defeat.

Exaggerated Fear

This fear is exaggerated. You never go for a terrible ride if you sacrifice only with a good trump suit. The real disasters occur when both partners overbid and when the trump suit is strong.

Moreover, there is nothing really bad about taking an occasional loss of 700 points. You cannot expect to make a profit on every transaction even when you are conducting a highly profitable business.

If you are a reasonable sacrifice bidder, you will usually manage to pay out only 300 or perhaps 500 points to stop the opponent from bidding and making a game. Since their game is worth 500 points or more, you break even when you pay out 500 points at a deliberate overbid; and you save points when you pay out only 300 points.

It's no bargain, of course, to pay out 700 points, but don't overlook the occasional real profit. Now and then you try to sacrifice only to discover that the opponents bid on instead of doubling you. If they go down at their high contract, you wind up plus 100 points or so instead of minus 500 or so.

You can afford to lose 700 points now and then if you occasionally push the opponents overboard and wind up with a plus score. What matters is not what you do on a single hand but what results you get in the long run.

If you sacrifice aggressively against ten games and lose 300 three times, 500 three times, 700 twice, and collect 100 twice, your total loss for the ten hands is only 3,600 points. If you sit still and let the opponents make their ten games you will lose 500 points per hand, or 5,000 points in all.

The Phantom Save

If your opponents are aggressive sacrificers you can sometimes give them a scare to show their grandchildren by inducing them to take a "phantom save" — a sacrifice against a contract that you couldn't have made.

All of the conditions were favorable when this hand came along in an intercity match a few weeks ago in Los Angeles. East and West were vulnerable, so that their slam was worth 1,370 points if they could make it. North and South were not vulnerable, so that they could have points even if they went down seven to stop the opponents from making a vulnerable slam.

North raised spades, partly to indicate that a good trump suit was available for a sacrifice. Well, if North-South wanted to sacrifice, West was willing to give them their chance. So West jumped to six clubs.

West could not be sure that six clubs was a makeable contract, but he didn't have to be sure. He was sure of something else: that one of the opponents would crack under the pressure.

West was right: South decided to take the sacrifice. How could South tell that each opponents had two little spades?

As a matter of fact, East might have made the slam even if South had failed to sacrifice. South might have led the king of hearts instead of a spade. East would win, draw trumps, and discard dummy's spades on high diamonds.

Take Maximum

Having induced South to take a phantom sacrifice, East and West proceeded to exact the maximum in penalties. East won the first trick with the queen of diamonds, got the singleton ace of hearts out of the way, and then led a low club to West.

West returned a heart for East to ruff and then ruffed East's high diamond to lead another heart for a second ruff. The defenders thus took the first six tricks, collecting a tidy 900 points instead of losing 100 at six clubs.

Nation's Negro Crisis Picks Up Speed in It's Spread

BY SID MOODY

AP Newsfeatures Writer

...When, how, where did it happen?

Perhaps on the day in Birmingham when a hand reached for the hose nozzle. Maybe somewhere else, on a different day. But now, suddenly, racial crisis is here, a giant shadow darkening the national scene.

For years the nation has said racial solution would take time, lots of it. But somehow, swiftly, the sands ran out. The time is now.

Time for decision in the corridors of Congress and the town council of Cambridge, Md. In the school yard and the factory. In Harlem and Chicago and Danville, Va. and Greenwood.

Editor's Note—Is America in this turbulent summer, plummeting headlong toward permanent discord? What are the true dimensions of the integration struggle? Here, in the first of a series of Associated Press reports on the deepening crisis, is a close look at what Secretary of State Rusk calls "the worst domestic crisis since 1865."

Miss. At the hamburger stand where the Negroes are kneeling. In the suburban development where the colored family moved in up the street. In the policy meetings of the great political parties and in the minds of all Americans face to face, finally, with their own personal decision: Where DO I stand on the racial question?

The Southerner—any white man anywhere—holding to the status quo shakes his head over the Negro crime rate, his school record, over what might happen should the Negro majorities of the South get the vote. But these questions raise another: How determined must the stand-patter be in the face of a now grimly determined Negro?

"Fires of frustration and discord are burning in every city," said President Kennedy. Secretary of State Rusk calls it the worst domestic crisis since 1865. As the world watches the world writhes.

Crisis Spreading

The crisis has left blood in the streets. But that is not new. What is new is its gathering speed and spread.

A cross burns on the lawn at the home of a Montclair, N. J., school girl who has included some Negroes in a party for her classmates. A leading white clergyman is arrested in Baltimore. A Black Muslim is shot in Los Angeles and Negroes demonstrate in Boston, Birmingham, the Bronx and too many other places to count.

"Things can happen so rapidly—they may be doing it now—that no one can keep a perspective on it," said Dr. John Morsell, assistant to Roy Wilkins, head of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Are we in truth careening downhill with no one at the wheel? Could an accumulation of such sparking fuses as Jackson, Miss., lead to a national explosion?

"I would hope in the last 20 years we have developed mechanisms that would mediate or modify," Morsell said. "No one thinks we'll have another depression like the '30s because of modifiers built into the economy. I think the same may be true of civil rights."

As an example, the Urban League points out that there has been no violence in the southern cities where it has organized biracial committees. The attorney general's office points out that since government officials began rounds of talks with business leaders in May there has been some desegregation in 46 cities of more than 10,000 population in 14 southern and border states. It hopes passage of Kennedy's civil rights bill will ease pressure.

Mississippi's Gov. Ross Barnett, on the other hand, feels the bill would violate the "rights of man" and would "reap a bloody harvest" from aroused whites fighting blacks.

Violence Foreseen

Violence if it passes, violence if it doesn't. That's the point the crisis may have reached.

"No one pretends this bill is going to deal with every valid grievance," said one of the young men in the attorney general's office. "But at the moment the Negro has no way to protest but to go into the streets. One of the major purposes of the bill is to give him an avenue into the courts."

And if the bill is defeated and the avenue becomes a dead end leaving the Negro once again parading outside the lunch counter, what then?

"Then, in effect, Congress will have said we'd rather offer the Negro dogs, hoses and nightsticks rather than his inherent rights," said Dr. Kenneth Clark, Negro psychologist and professor at New York University. "To this the Negro has to say no. If he said yes, he'd be confirming the myth of his own inferiority."

"The Negro is asking not to change society but to be included in it—to have the franchise, equal education, removal of arbitrary barriers in the purchase of homes, in public accommodations. He's really asking America to stop being hypocritical, to fulfill the promise of the constitution. From where I sit these are pretty modest goals. No one should have to die for these things. The Negro can't be intimidated out of demanding them."

Determination

This determination, too, is new. It has been growing since World War II when the Negro saw the world and fought to make it safe for a democracy he felt was denied him at home. It was spurred by the postwar emergence of the black and yellow nations, the 1954 Supreme Court school decision. There was the 1957 Montgomery bus boycott that began when a Negro woman wouldn't give up her seat to a white and ended with the Negroes realizing for the first time the power of stubborn persistence. The young Freedom Riders of 1961 who risked harm and even death stirred the Negro further.

Yet for all his new militancy the Negro in many instances has shown disciplined restraint. Splashed with ketchup or kicked in the shins, he has as often as not turned the other cheek.

"For 300 years the Negro has been accustomed to injustice," said Clark. "What you're seeing now is the result. Never in his past could the American Negro improve his situation by mob action because he would have been annihilated. The Indian fought back and look what happened to him."

But "Uncle Tom" has become a nasty epithet now to many Negroes and, a century after the Emancipation Proclamation, the Negro is impatient.

This bewilders, angers, the South. "Why," said a surprised white man in Cambridge when he saw an old Negro acquaintance of his marching with young demonstrators outside a restaurant, "just last week I gave him a cord of wood."

Negroes' Desire

The Negro in the South today wants not wood but the vote, to eat in the same restaurant as the white, sleep in the same hostelry. The white southerner, who claims to know the Negro best, blames the unrest on out-

Across the Racial Crisis, white man faces black, and knows the time of decision is at hand. The Negroes are on the move, North and South. Time has side agitation and certainly there is much of this.

"But that's one of the myths the last months have dispelled that the Negro would be fine if the outside agitators would only leave him alone," said Clary. "No one can claim now he doesn't know what the Negro wants."

He wants jobs: In Detroit where he is 20 per cent of the population but 60 per cent of the unemployed; for his young, almost half of whom in the 16-21 age group are jobless; across the nation where his unemployment rate has been triple that of the whites.

"For the Negro," said Whitney Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League, "there has been no recession. He's in a depression."

Yet the Negro is faced with a growing automation that has need for greater schooling and training than he has had. "It would be different if he had this," said a veteran craft union official in Washington. "There's no prejudice in skill. But you can't put an unqualified man in a skilled job. The unions would be cutting their throats if they lowered job standards. Why some of our pipefitters are installing valves on atomic reactors no bigger than your fists that cost $35,000."

Then give us the skills, say the Negroes and they demonstrate against the traditional neighborhood school pattern by which you go to the school nearest your home. This has meant an almost de facto segregation in some northern towns with their de facto Negro ghettos. Whether true or not the Negroes claim the schools in the white areas are better and demand to be allowed to go to them. In Englewood, Montclair, Morris-town and Plainfield in New Jersey and in New York, they've made their point. But the Plainfield couple who are moving away rather than have their children "go to school with a lot of Negroes" may not be alone.

When the whites move out, sometime the Negro moves in. Blockbusting begins. Other white neighborhoods remain so. But what pressures build up in the Negro who gets his education, who can afford the white homes but can't cross the unwritten color lines around the Harlems of the north?

Color Line

"The Negro from the South comes north and he finds the signs are down and no one is going to say 'nigger' but then he finds things are really the same," said Young. "He's hurt. He's at the gangplank. Where's he going to go now?"

That's the dilemma for the North, white and black. What's going to happen now?

"If you look at Kennedy's bill," said Young, "none of it effects the North. It talks about voting and public accommodations but you still have all those Negroes out on the street because of automation, in the ghettos because they can't buy houses."

The Negro of the Harlems of this country, he knows you're not going to transform a functional illiterate into a skilled workman overnight. But he wants some tangible evidence of change."

There are people on both sides trying to see that he gets it, governors, union leaders, civic groups, educators, the Urban Leagues, NAACP's, congressmen. But the ultimate solution will not be a paragraph in the law books. It will come from the aggregate of all Americans in how they react to the deepening crisis. At home, on the job, in the subway, at the polling booth.

Painful Route

If there is no foreseeing the future, there is a looking glass that strikingly mirrors the painful route to stalemate and its tragic cost. It is the attractive Chesapeake Bay town of Cambridge, Md. Where, across a throughfare ironically named Race Street, both sides of America's racial equation glower at each other.

Crisis at Cambridge didn't start the night last June the white stores in the Negro section were burned or the white men were shot by an unknown gunman. In fact of all the towns on the old eastern shore of Maryland, Cambridge probably would have been the last to pick as a trouble spot. It was making progress — Negroes on the school board and town council schools being integrated (only five grades to go), games integrated, mixed church Lenten services. Why, Cambridge was one of Maryland's first towns to hire Negro policemen.

Then, in January, 1961, some out-of-towners from the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee picketed a tavern where the oystermen and crab fishermen hang out. There was a scuffle. Demands from the demonstrators to desegregate restaurants in town met with a request for time from the council. Nothing doing.

"Try to understand," said a Marylander. "A funny little Negro comes in and says you shape up in three days or else if you're the mayor, what would you do?"

The rift widened. Local Negroes formed their own committee and became increasingly militant in their demands for complete integration of the schools, restaurants and equal job opportunities in the new factories that an aggressive group of businessmen was attracting.

Needed Pressure

"We would have moved to a solution," said Maurice Rumpo, editor of the Cambridge Banner, the daily newspaper. "Maybe we needed some pressure. What town doesn't? But the demonstration at the Shoplank Inn broke the back of moderation."

In other towns perhaps a middle ground could have been found. But the whites of Cambridge are proud, willing to eat with Negroes in a New York restaurant but not to be pushed into doing it at home. The Negroes felt integration was a right.

"At the Yacht Club or in their homes, the whites are charming people," said one out-of-towner. "But they know that 100 years ago their forebears owned these people."

Yet the younger Negroes out of work, impatient, weren't willing to accept gradualness. "They

felt the Uncle Toms and old aunts weren't working fast enough," said State Attorney C. Burnam Mace.

Nonetheless a biracial committee persuaded four of the better restaurants to start serving Negroes. One of them lost most of its white trade. When Negroes sat down, uninvited, at a table where white people were seated, townspeople said it was a shocking breach of manners. The restaurant, nearly broke from loss of business, desegregated.

The whites lost confidence in the Negro leadership, headed by Mrs. Gloria Richardson whom they accused of just shaking her head "no-no-no" when compromise was suggested. Last May the biracial committee disbanded, demonstrations persisted. Then came the June nights of arson and shooting.

White women driving to pick up their maids in the Negro section were stoned. White men were pulled from their cars and pummeled. One June 14 the National Guard moved into the vacuum between the races. Order was restored at bayonet point and the town council agreed to desegregate the restaurants and consider a Negro housing program. The restaurant plan is subject to approval by the voters where there is a heavy white majority. The Negroes resumed demonstrations as soon as the guard pulled out July 8 and two nights later Cambridge assuaged its agony with gunfire.

Events' Reason

Why did this happen?

"No one realized what this would turn into," said one Cambridge businessman. "If we were a community where a Negro was hit on the head every time he put his foot in the door, we might have moved faster. But we were making progress. When the Negroes got unruly, the whites had to prove they were men, too."

Mace blames hoodlums on both sides for the violence. Another man close to the Cambridge tragedy thinks it happened because "there were damn few people with any guts." People willing to lead, to say the unpopular, to keep trying.

It was all of these. Pride, hoodlums, go-slow Uncle Toms and impetuous youths, a 4-1 unemployment ratio black to white, old time traditions, a feeling of you'll get your dessert, just don't - push - me, passions outspeeding efforts to find agreement.

Such tinder is present in varying degrees in thousands of Cambridges across the United States. In Cambridge it produced a fire. If it can there, why not anywhere else?

Maybe because Americans will have patience enough to determine that the nation can do better than bayonets in the street. For all its damage — business off as much as 25 per cent and a deep hatred that may take years to dispel — Cambridge's experience has succeeded in convincing other eastern shore towns to desegregate. They did it without incident.

But Cambridge set another example. It proved, said a state official, that violence can work. If you push hard enough come what may, you might get a restaurant integrated.

But the cost to Cambridge has been severe. Multiplied nationally it could be catastrophic.

Tangible Evidence

Yet the national Negro leaders are not blindly militant. Mrs. Richardson, for all her head-shaking determination, recognizes the new dawn for the Negro will not be tomorrow. But, say his leaders, the Negro insists on what Young called "tangible evidence of change."

Perhaps the nation is today where Cambridge was months ago. What the Negro wanted was clear. What he was going to get or how was not so certain.

Negro leaders feel there is time and it is working for them. The Kennedy bill would help bank the fires, they feel. Its defeat, says Morsell, might bring violence but he sees a deeper, more damaging reaction: general withdrawal and isolation from the mainstream of American life.

Clark sees checks in the Negro character itself that could keep the racial crisis from going over the brink. For one thing, the Negro's centuries as a slave have conditioned him against violence as a recourse.

Furthermore, he has a distaste for extremism, said Clark. "Through his history the Negro has had to be flexible to survive. The rigidities of Communism, of Black Muslimism, are incompatible to the imperative flexibility of the Negro. When the Communists came out in the '30s for self-determination in the Black Belt, they were really advocating segregation against the whites. The Negro doesn't want this. He's flirted with it — causes — Graveyard, Liberia, Muslimism — but these have not been his main thrust, which is to be an American."

He might like to hear Malcolm X give it to the white man, but, said Morsell, "for 150 years the Negro has believed in his ultimate acceptance into the national organism. Even during slavery few Negroes wanted to go back to Africa."

"The Negro has been here twice as long as the Kennedys," said Clark. "He is not an alien person in our midst. This is what the segregationist doesn't see."

And perhaps the Negro's deep regard for the only country he knows will be a bridge over which he will meet the white man half way.

For it must surely be a sign of hope that when Medgar Evers' embittered, outraged friends gathered the night after he was murdered, they didn't close the meeting with a call to arms or an oath of revenge. They said "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

Two Young Men, one white, one Negro, sit in friendly conversation in midtown New York. With racial tension at boiling point in many places, degrees of quiet integration go on in others, including the South. Of the Negroes' demands, Dr. Kenneth Clark, Negro psychologist and professor at New York University, says, "The Negro is asking not to change society but to be included in it." # Civil Rights Bill Target of Filibuster King

BY JACK BELL

AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the opinion of many colleagues, the man who will bark the signals in the civil rights filibuster might have become President if he hadn't been from Georgia.

Because he is from Georgia, Sen. Richard Brevard Russell instead will command the corporal's guard of about 18 lusty-lunged southern Senators who will try to talk to death President Kennedy's civil rights program.

The tall, balding senator with the George Washington nose will be pitting canny strategy and an unequalled knowledge of the Senate's rules against an emotional surge generated by Negro demonstrations and police-fog reaction.

It remains problematical whether Russell's opponents can collect the necessary two-thirds approval of those voting and apply the cloture rule to end debate, thus killing off the filibuster.

Before that happens the cats may go up in the cloakrooms for around-the-clock sessions to test the stamina of Russell's troops. Whatever the outcome, Dick Russell seems likely to retain his position as the most powerful single individual in the Senate.

At 65, with 30 years of Senate service behind him, Russell remains the quiet, courtly gentleman who reflects his heritage as the bachelor son of a struggling country lawyer who rose to be chief justice of his state.

Russell can turn tiger on the Senate floor when he detects what he believes are unfair assaults on states' rights. But his colleagues continue to respect him even as he shows his claws.

Two Shots

As a representative of moderate conservatism, Russell has had two shots at his party's presidential nomination and was defeated in each largely because he was branded as too sectional.

In the 1948 convention which nominated President Harry S. Truman, southerners piled up 234 protest votes for Russell, who wasn't even on hand. When many of his southern brethren bolted, Russell stayed silent, but regular.

Sen. Russell

In 1952, the Georgia Senator went after the nomination. The fact that he got only 202 out of about 1,200 votes demonstrated again that a man whose record and personality probably would have been acceptable had he hailed from the north, west or east could not surmount the political disadvantage of his ties to the south.

Philosophical about this, Russell maintains his party regularly despite his strong opposition to parts of his President's program.

"While I am always for those who are running on the Democratic ticket," he said, "I must confess that I have had varying degrees of enthusiasm for various candidates on the ticket."

Russell helped campaign for the Kennedy-Johnson ticket in 1960. But even the persuasive powers of his longtime friend and close associate, Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, may not be enough to get him into the 1964 campaign after the President's civil rights stand.

Denounced JFK

The Georgia Senator didn't mince words in denouncing the Kennedy legislative program, with emphasis on the section which would enforce desegregation on privately-owned businesses which serve the public. Nor did he pull punches in criticism of the President. "The President of the United States has a higher call to leadership than to use threats of mass violence and disregard of local law as a means of securing action in the courts and congress, however desirable he may regard it to be," he said.

And on the accommodations section: "If the commerce clause will sustain an act to compel the white owner of a dining hall to accept a Negro against his wishes. It can be used to sustain the validity of legislation that will compel his admittance into the living room or bedroom of any citizen."

But outside the field of civil rights, Russell is a man to be reckoned with on major national issues.

Stabilizer

Russell looks upon the Senate as the greatest stabilizing force in preserving our constitution. He cherishes the Senate's traditions as the last world body of free debate.

Moreover, he is a charter member of the inner circle, where "check it with Dick" is a frequently used phrase when controversial legislation is at hand.

From his vantage point as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and high ranking membership on the Appropriations and Space Committees, as well as the Senate House atomic energy group, the Georgia Senator has a finger on almost every government activity.

He speaks frankly in White House conferences. He thought Kennedy's quarantine solution to the Cuban missile problem last fall was short of the action needed.

Russell's advice: "Go in there and wipe them out."

When he first came to the Senate, Russell had supported Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal. He voted for Social Security, the NRA and TVA. He was the authority of an amendment out of which the farm parity payment system grew.

But over the years, he has become conservative on fiscal matters. He told his colleagues recently:

Balanced Budget

"I have voted against increases in the foreign aid program and I have also voted against a number of other big-spend programs and if a majority of the members of the Senate had voted as I did, the budget would have been in balance every year since the Korean War."

In the field of national defense, Russell is recognized as pretty much the voice of the Senate. He summed up his position with this observation:

"To me the most important conclusion to be drawn from today's state of world affairs is that we must be militarily strong."

Russell demonstrated his power in the Senate last April when his Armed Services Committee rebelled against him and by a 9-8 vote added $196 million to begin the purchase of component parts for the Nike-Zeus anti-missile missile.

The Georgia Senator told his colleagues this system would cost $20 billion and in the words of Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, Air Force chief, would provide a defense for 26 cities "and they would not be defended very well."

Advocates of the Nike-Zeus forced an unusual closed session of the Senate to discuss the matter. When the doors were opened, Russell's amendment to cut out the additional fund was approved by a lop-sided 58-16 vote.

In that case, Russell backed the judgment of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara. He and McNamara parted company, however, on the issue of building the RS70, long range reconnaissance bomber. Russell thinks it would be better to go on with the bomber production longer than McNamara wants to do so, but he concedes he hasn't been able to change the secretary's mind.

But Russell takes defeat as philosophically as he does victory. His theory is that a man does what he thinks is in his country's interests.

World Awaits Comments By DeGaulle

Monday Likely to Hit
JFK Trip, Bomb Ban

BY JOSEPH E. DYNAN
PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle, who has been on the sidelines while the Big Three nuclear powers talked in Moscow, takes the spotlight in the coming week in one of his rare news conferences.

He may make a major policy statement, but what this might be, only De Gaulle knows. Usually, even Cabinet ministers do not know. On one occasion five irate ministers resigned in protest against what the president had said on European policy.

De Gaulle has scheduled a news conference for Monday. His last one, on Jan. 14, jarred the Western world with a veto on British membership in the Common Market, and curt rejection of President Kennedy's proposals for an integrated nuclear force for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Reply Platform
De Gaulle may use the conference as a platform to reply to Kennedy's actions since then — particularly to Kennedy's speeches in Germany, pledging enduring American support to a truly "cohesive" Europe within an Atlantic partnership.

Other events since last January which may call forth comment include the open split between the Soviet Union and Red China, and the partial nuclear test ban accord among the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union.

Kennedy, in his speech at American University in Washington, called for a new look at America's attitude toward the Soviet Union and the cold war. Premier Khrushchev, in speeches in East Berlin and Moscow, has seemed to offer an easing in East-West tension.

French Atom
De Gaulle, touchy as ever on France's place in the world, has asserted consistently that France must have its own nuclear arsenal as long as any other country has one and must participate on equal terms in any high-level global decisions.

The president has long predicted a rift between the Soviet Union and Red China which could lead to a settlement in Europe "from the Atlantic to the Urals" as Moscow sought to secure its rear in an inevitable tussle with Peking.

France has warned that Paris will not be bound by any nuclear test ban achieved by the "Anglo-Saxons" and the Soviets. De Gaulle has declared that France must continue to develop its own nuclear arm unless all nuclear powers agree to scrap their own arsenals and delivery systems as a first step to complete and controlled disarmament.

At De Gaulle news conferences, there is no give and take of question and answer. They are more like a long, rambling speech to a hall full of newsmen, photographers, civil servants and hangers-on, with the Cabinet sitting to one side as spectators.

Butte des Morts Bridge to Close

OSHKOSH (AP)—The Wisconsin Highway Department said Friday that the U.S. Highway 41 bridge over Lake Butte des Morts west of Oshkosh would be closed to all traffic from 3 a.m. to 6 a.m. on Tuesday.

Thereafter, for the next three days, all north-bound traffic on 41 will be diverted through Oshkosh while south-bound traffic will move in gravel on a single lane.

The rerouting will be necessary to permit the replacement of 50 to 75 feet of concrete on both sides of the bridge.

Despite Sales Tax Talk, Income Is Revenue Base

Wisconsin Continues to Depend On Increasing Levy on Earnings

By JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — In the long and stubborn quarrel about grafting sales taxation into the Wisconsin public revenue system, there has been a tendency to overlook the fact that the personal income tax remains the giant among the butresses of the state treasury. It will continue to be the chief state government revenue indefinitely.

Even during the last few years when there has been an apparent increase in public acceptance of sales taxation, the state has steadily increased the levies upon personal incomes — sharing some of the receipts with the local governments.

Highest Revenue

Today state taxes on wages, salaries and other forms of personal income raise about $220 million a year, which is by far the highest revenue collected from any single category of state taxation.

By comparison, the controversial sales taxes now on the books, levied two years ago, realize only about $60 million a year.

If the currently negotiated settlement for the present state tax stalemate is enacted into law, there will be more sales tax revenue. But the prospective total won't be much higher than about 50 per cent of the total exactions from the pockets of Wisconsin citizens according to their income.

Not only is there a trend for steady increases in the rate of income taxation by the state, but there also is a tendency for a "flattening" of the curve of progression in the rate structure. A larger ratio of the total income is now being paid by the lower bracket earners, because the last three legislatures have concluded that it would be risky — in economic competition with other states — to push up the maximum rates on the top levels of personal income.

Hold Top

Thus the 1961 legislature raised the rate in each $1,000 of taxable income, but kept the total rate of 10 per cent unchanged. The top rate applies to incomes of $15,000 and over. Thus also this legislature is likely to raise each bracket rate again, but there is a tacit and bi-partisan agreement that the top rate will remain at 10 per cent.

That agreement to broaden the base of the income tax was one of the principal although unrecorded consequences of former Gov. Gaylord Nelson's "blue ribbon" revenue study commission report.

The pattern of reducing the progressivity of the income tax rates resulted from many causes. Historically there was the demonstrated fact that an extreme rate of progressivity made for unreliable yields. The slightest disruptions in the economy were immediately reflected in reduced income tax collections. Moreover, the huge bulk of taxable income is represented in the brackets under $5,000, so that a slight increase in the lower brackets would produce more dollars than even prohibitively or painfully high boosts in the upper brackets.

Withholding

But the most important reason for the comparative ease with which governors and legislators lately have been able to discuss further across-the-board income tax rate increases is the operation of the income tax withholding system. With weekly or regular pay period deductions from his wage and salary check, the taxpayer has become less sensitive about the exactions. The biennial increases amount to only a few cents per pay period for most ordinary earners.

The income tax, more than any other major levy now in use for governmental financing in the state, has a substantial built-in hedge against inflation. Without that hedge, the state government would have been in a severe financial pinch at least a decade earlier, as a result of the huge rises in the costs of payrolls, materials, supplies, buildings and the thousands of other costs paid for by the state treasury.

As an example, the average factory worker who earned $2,500 a year 20 years ago and is now earning $5,000 or more expects to pay a higher tax. But his income tax liability has increased at a greater rate than has his earnings, because of the progressivity of the rate scale.

General Growth

The income tax system also responds mechanically to the general growth of the state and its population. There are now about 1,400,000 income tax payers. About 250,000 persons annually are required to file, but because of the modest size of their earnings or the size of their deductions, do not have a tax liability. The number of taxpayers is growing at the rate of about 50,000 yearly.

The Wisconsin income tax was one of the pioneering enactments of the state's early governments of 1911. But it is not as typical of state financing even half a century later as is the sales tax. About 32 states now tax incomes to some extent. Forty of them have basic sales taxes.

Another indication of the sensitivity of statehouse politicians to the comparative weight of higher bracket income taxes in Wisconsin is in the tacit rejection of the "surtax" on incomes as a temporary financing expedient. At least a dozen times in the past legislatures enacted surtaxes to bridge temporary budget difficulties. But this year in the most serious financing crisis in state history, the surtax has not yet been seriously considered.

The surtax is a tax on the income tax, and has the effect of increasing the progressivity of the rate scale. Surtaxes of 20 and 25 per cent have been in effect for brief periods during the last decade. The highest surtax ever levied was a 60 per cent rate in the late 1930s, tied to a depression relief program.

Historically the state income tax was designed also as a means of relieving the pressure upon the property tax of the localities.

Share Revenue

For many years local governments and the state treasury shared the receipts equally — three local shares going 40 per cent to municipalities, 10 per cent to counties.

But as the pressure upon the state treasury has increased — through higher direct state subsidies to localities as for schools, and other reasons — the state has gradually reduced the local treasury share of the proceeds. Today it stands at one third. If the current legislature increases the income tax rates again, under a proposal now pending, the locality share will be adjusted downward again in order to keep the proceeds of the rate increases for the state budget.

But because of the growth of the income tax base over the years, the localities' shares represent a vital part of their local financing structure. Without those shares, many localities would be bankrupted. To recognize the partnership nature of the income tax system, and to mollify the taxpayers, the legislature several years ago ordered the tax department to label the tax the "state-municipal income tax" on the assessment forms distributed each winter.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Newcomers to Illinois may vote for president and vice president if they have lived in the state 60 days under legislation signed Friday by Gov. Otto Kerner.

Special ballots listing only the candidates for president and vice president will be given such voters, enabling them to bypass the one-year state and local residence requirements.

motorist became furious over the delay, followed the hearse to the cemetery, and berated the funeral director at the burial plot.

Adventist President Says Demonstrations For Christ Are Effective

PORTAGE (AP)—Theodore Carich, North American president of the Seventh Day Adventists, told more than 5,000 persons attending a camp session Friday that a demonstration for Christ is more effective than a demonstration for political rights.

"If men expect to live together in heaven," he said, "they must learn to live together now. Demonstrations for political rights have their place, but a demonstration for Christ is better and more effective."

"Whereas the former often sheds the blood of men, the latter applies the healing merits of Christ's blood. Here alone is the power that will draw men of diverse nationality and color together."

VA Reminds Servicemen of Insurance Change Deadline

More than 3,670 holders of GI "RS" insurance policies in Wisconsin have less than three months remaining in which to qualify for a special dividend by exchanging for "W" term policies or converting to permanent insurance.

J. P. Cullen, VA's regional manager in Milwaukee, has announced.

The special dividend, authorized for this purpose, expires Sept. 13. After that date, "RS" policyholders may still convert or exchange their policies, but they will no longer be eligible for the dividend payment.

Only GI insurance policyholders with "RS" insurance that was issued to Korean conflict servicemen are concerned in this program. The special dividend, authorized for this purpose, expires Sept. 13. After that date, "RS" policyholders may still convert or exchange their policies, but they will no longer be eligible for the dividend payment.

Annual Gathering at Forest Junction Gets Underway on Friday

By ROBERT HAESE

FOREST JUNCTION — The summer assembly for the Eastern district of the Wisconsin Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren Church, to be held here for the 58th consecutive year, opens Friday evening and continues in daily services through Sunday, Aug. 11.

Only three times since establishment of the camp in 1906 has the even tenor of the annual event been interrupted with heavy rains in June, 1920, postponed the gathering for two months.

War-time restrictions in the form of rationed gasoline and food supplies resulted in curtailed preparations in 1945. End of the war and easing of restrictions came in time however for a fairly normal operation of the camp.

The Rev. J. Erwin Branson of Plainfield, Ind., is guest speaker this year and appears on the program daily from the opening Sunday. It is his first appearance at Forest Junction and he comes here from a similar gathering at the Barrington camp ground in the Illinois conference.

The Rev. Robert Doverspike of Marquette delivers the opening sermon at 8:15 p.m. Friday following a 15-minute song service conducted by the Rev. Thomas Johns of Van Dyne. The Rev. Herbert E. Zebarth of Fond du Lac, Eastern District conference superintendent, conducts a communion service at 10:30 a.m. next Sunday. The Rev. Clifford Olsen of Richfield conducts afternoon Bible studies Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons.

The new science sermon film, "City of the Bees," released last February by the West Los Angeles headquarters of Moody Institute of Science, is being shown at Saturday's evening service. The 40-minute film, which is 10 years in production, is the Christian answer to a Soviet film on bee society which came to the attention of Dr. Irwin A. Moon, manager of the Moody Institute of Science, through a television presentation in 1954 after a year of preliminary work on the Moody film had already been completed.

The gospel message of the film applies the bee's pattern of behavior to a discussion of man's pattern of behavior and his basic needs.

A Member of the Wisconsin Assembly indignantly remonstrates with some of his colleagues after one of the innumerable votes in the state assembly on the tax issue. The man gesticulating is Assemblyman McCormick of Milwaukee, a leading Democrat.

A Northeast Wisconsin Profile

Many People, Small Area Mark Key to Brown County

By JOHN DOYLE
Post-Crescent News Service

Brown County is the oldest county in Northeastern Wisconsin and in the state. It ranks sixth in population in the state with 125,082 residents, and boasts the sixth largest city in the state—Green Bay.

It is a rail and highway center, a port on the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Seaway, and one of the state's major air terminals.

First of a Series

Its population growth of 27.2 per cent in the past decade makes it one of the fastest growing Wisconsin counties.

With Crawford County, Brown was the first in the state to be created (1818). It was the landing site of the first white man to come to Wisconsin.

The 2,600 acres of water within the borders ranks 60th in the state.

The population of Brown County is relatively young, the median age being 25.4 years compared with the state average of 29.4. It also is one of the more densely populated counties, having 238.3 persons per square mile.

Brown is ranked fourth in the number of persons under 18 years of age, and 68th in the number of residents over 65. It is tied for fifth place in the number of persons per household with 3.64.

The county also is one of the leaders in property value, ranking fifth with a total of $627,812,000. The average cash income per family here is $6,142 or $84 more than the state average.

The county has fewer households earning less than $4,000 than does the state as a whole, more in the $4,000 to $10,000 bracket and the same percentage in the over $10,000 class.

The labor force is over 29,000 and is employed at better than 2,483 businesses, again close to the top in comparison with other counties. The importance of manufacturing here is illustrated by the employment of over 12,000 persons in industry alone.

The county, and principally Green Bay, is an area retail, wholesale, transportation and services center. In the past 30 years employment in manufacturing has increased from 1,000 to 12,000.

ing and services has doubled, construction increased by 75 per cent, transportation by 65, while farming has dropped by 50 per cent.

The annual wage of a production worker here is $4,466, up from $2,512 in 1947, but $35 lower than the state average. Here, however, the industrialized South east weighs heavily.

Product Value Up
As in the rest of Wisconsin, and the nation for that matter, the number of farms is diminishing. There are presently approximately 2,338 farms containing 282,995 acres. This is 87 per cent of the area and a drop from 91 per cent in 1949.

While the number of farms has dwindled, the total value of the products has risen from $13 million in 1950 to close to $17 million today. Livestock and dairy products are of prime importance.

Thirteen per cent of the land in the county is forested, including some also listed as farm land. Lumbering, however, has long ceased to be an important economic base. Now, only 10,060 cords of principally elm, maple and oak are cut annually. This, however, is over 2,000 cords more than is allowable to maintain the present stands of timber.

11 Employers
The 11 largest employers in Brown County reflect the county's economic base.

Paper mills, heavy equipment, food processing, a utility, a retail store, clothing manufacturing plants and a transportation firm top the list.

The top 11 are: Northern Paper Mills (1,250 to 1,500); Charmin Paper Products Co. (1,000 to 1,250); Northwest Engineering Co. (1,000 to 1,250); Fort Howard Paper Co. (1,000 to 1,250); Wisconsin Public Service Corp. (600 to 700); Olson Transportation Co. and H. C. Prange Co. (500 to 600 each); Pauly Cheese Co. and Northern Shoe Co., Pulaski, (300 to 400) and Milprink, Inc., De Pere (250 to 300).

Small Industries

factories, distributors of all kinds, and 21 oil and gasoline terminals.

Since the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway, the Port of Green Bay has boomed. Over 700 ships a year now tie up here, including approximately 100 foreign vessels. These discharge and take on over three million tons of cargo.

The three railroads which serve the area haul untold millions of tons of merchandise, some staying here, much more being relayed in all directions by various means of transportation.

Of every 1,000 Brown County residents, 95 have manufacturing jobs. This compares with an average of 115 of every 1,000 state residents and a ratio of 162 to 1,000 in Manitowish County and 121 to 1,000 in Marinette County. Brown's ratio seems to illustrate its diverse economy.

State Lands
There is one state park and two county parks, in addition to 3,370 acres of state owned or leased hunting, fishing and recreational area. Lost Dauphin park is a state owned, 19 acre site south of De Pere. County parks are Pamperin (71 acres) and Smith (10 acres).

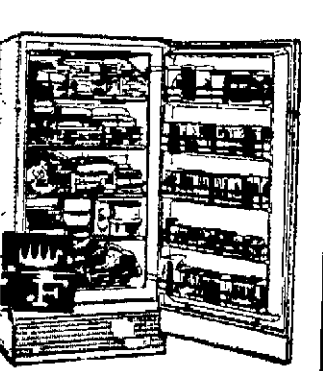

State lands include 1,571 acres in the Town of Bellevue, 1,000 acres in the Town of Holland, 450 acres in the Town of Sunnico and 841 acres in Sensiba.

Brown ranks ninth in the number of foreign stock residents, with 18,303 persons born in a foreign country or whose parent or parents were foreign born.

Germans top the list of foreign stock, followed by "other Europe" and Polish. The 1960 census notes that "other Europe" refers to the many Luxembourgers who have settled here, compared with those from Belgium.

Austin Straubel field, located southwest of Green Bay, is the state's third busiest airport, behind Milwaukee and Madison. Its 25 flights daily carried 128,119 passengers who either began or ended their trip here. All but four of the 25 scheduled flights are 44-passenger Convairs of North Central Airlines.

Michigan to Honor Henry Ford on Centennial Of His Birth With Plaque Raised by Children

BY CHARLES C. CAIN

DETROIT — (AP) — A simple ceremony on the farmland where he was born will highlight Michigan's observance this week of the centennial of its most famous son — the late Henry Ford.

People from all walks of life, ranging from Gov. George Romney to Dearborn school children whose pennies paid for a $1,500 plaque at the farm, will commemorate Ford's birth July 30, 1863, in a farmhouse near suburban Dearborn.

Ford's three grandsons—Henry II, Benson and William Clay — all key executives with the motor company their grandfather founded, will participate.

Top Event

Top event will be the dedication Tuesday of the plaque marking the site on which stood the farmhouse from whence Ford went forth to international fame.

Ford, son of a farmer, took a short fling at farm life himself before rebelling at the drudgery of the work and setting out on a career that was to make him the world's best known automotive figure.

His most fantastic success was in the building of the Model T Ford which he once said "put wheels under the world." More than 15½ million of these four-cylinder, plain-looking cars were turned out and were found in every nook and corner of the world.

Many of Ford's actions were controversial, but few would doubt that he deserved recognition as one of the greatest mechanical geniuses of all time.

Mass Production

Money came to him easily within months after he founded the Ford Motor Co. in 1903 with just $28,000 in cash—none of it his. His ideas for speedy, mass production of autos on a moving assembly line soon made Ford the No. 1 auto maker of the world.

Up to the time that Ford put the assembly line principle into operation, it had taken an average of 12½ hours to turn out a car. Ford was impatient with that slow pace. He wanted to build a lot of cars at a price the average wage earner could afford.

The assembly line idea, crude at first, soon won world acclaim for Ford and by 1920, he was turning out a car a minute.

Production Leader

The Ford Motor Co. soon became the automotive production leader of the world. From 1903 to 1927, the company piled up $900 million in profits.

Ford, an ardent pacifist, got some of his most adverse publicity with his actions before the United States got into World Wars I and II.

In World War I, he spent over a half million dollars in organizing a peace ship which was to take a group of leading world figures to Europe to "get the boys out of the trenches before Christmas" of 1916.

When the United States got into the first World War, Ford put the full facilities of his company at government disposal and built a wide variety of government-ordered items, ranging from ambulances to Eagle boats—predecessors of the PT boats of World War II.

Major Mistake

Historians generally concede that Ford made a major mistake in the late 1920s when he retained full control of company policy, even though Edsel held the title of president. Ford, faced with increasing competition from General Motors and Chrysler, still turned out its old standby, the Model T, until 1927, when customer and dealer demand forced the company to bring out the Model A.

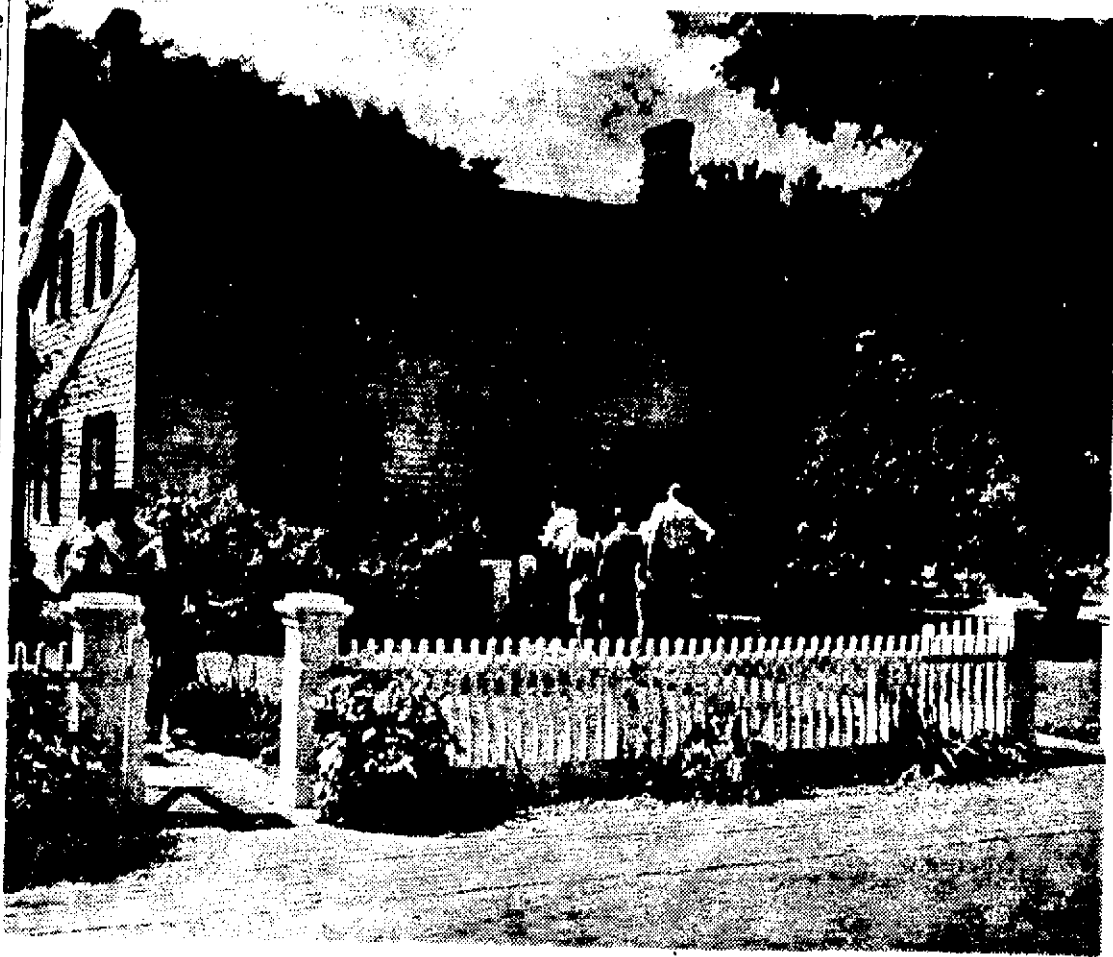

When war clouds threatened again, Ford—who accepted a controversial decoration from the Nazi German government in 1938—was again strongly opposed to U.S. entry into war. But again when Pearl Harbor stunned the nation, Henry Ford put his entire effort into aiding the U.S. military operation.

One of his notable achievements was the building of the huge Willow Run bomber plant in Michigan which used auto production line methods to run out nearly 400 bombers a month.

Mild Strokes

The senior Ford suffered a mild stroke in 1939 and another early in World War II, but kept in close contact with his company's operations. He was deeply affected when Edsel died of cancer in May 1943. Henry reassumed the presidency of the company, although he was 80 years old.

His grandson, Henry II, who was in Navy service, was released and joined the company. California plant to get them out and in 1945, succeeded his grandfather as president. He was aided by his grandmother, Clara, to transfer both grandsons to a plant of the company however, Ford, and his mother, Mrs. Edsel

Kentucky Wedding Notes Anniversary

WINCHESTER, Ky. (AP)—Judy Carol Hollon, 18, and Thomas Edward Hall, 19, will wed Aug. 7 with music provided by a dulcimer and the bride wearing a dress made in the style popular in 1776.

It will commemorate the 187th anniversary of the first wedding west of the Alleghenies, when Elizabeth Calloway and Samuel Henderson were married at near-by Boonesboro by Squire Boone, a brother of pioneer Daniel Boone.

A local civic club is footing the bill for the wedding and reception. A dulcimer is a three-stringed instrument said to have originated in the Kentucky highlands.

Ford, both of whom convinced Ford senior that it was time for him to step aside and end his one-man rule. It had brought Ford to the pinnacle but left it in poor shape to face the challenge of the 1940s.

Reorganization

Henry Ford II began reorganizing the company high command, bringing in such top men as Robert S. McNamara, who later became Ford president and then secretary of defense.

Henry Ford senior lived in semi-retirement for the remainder of his life.

Ironically, on the night he died—April 7, 1947—in his palatial $2-million home Fair Lane in suburban Dearborn, a flooding river had knocked out the electric power and telephone. Ford, born in a farm house equipped only with candles, died with only a few candles lighting his bedroom.
